SHEVVS

Set forth lately at Stutgart.

WRITTEN

First in German, and now in English

BY

G. Rodolfe Weckherlin, Secretarie
to ine Duke of Wirsemberg.

1. 2887

STVTGART.
Printed by John-Wyrich Refslin.

M. DC. XVL

#

MVSEVM BRITAN NICVM

y ga

44. 1.207-1253.031

Clare to have been been being

TO THE MOST HIGH ND MOST EXCELLENT PRINcesse, adorned with Pietie, Beautie and all Vertues,

ELISABETH,

ONELY DAVGHTER TO HIS MOST EXCELLENT Majestie of Great-Britaine; and Wife to the most high, mightie and excellent Prince Frederic, Prince Palatine of the Rhine, Elector, Duke of Baveere, Knight of the most noble and auncient order of the

Carter, mouse suit of OST CRACIOVS PRINCESSE,

I here most humbly prefent unto your Highnesse view a de-Cription of the triumphant sheros lately past at Stutgart. bleffed presence was the chiefe cause of the sherps: and your most-ho-2 ) K Knowle Weethersen noured noured name can beethe onely protection of this relation, which I could wish performed in better tearmes, as knowing more rudenesse in it, then it is fit to trouble your heavenlie eyes withall. But my wishbeeing as vaine, as (I must acknowledge) my skill is meane in this skilfull English tongue, I submisly beseech your Highnesse, it wouch safe a benigne acceptance to the devout desires of

Your Excellent Highnesse

beremin thumbly prefers

most humbly obedient ferrance

From Stuigare, the day of John Baptift, 1 6.1 6.

manifect.

G. Rodolfe Weckherlin

Busturally Peers Br

TO HER MOSTEKE cellent Highnesse.

F Aire Princesse, glorie of this season,
The truth of your praise (vertues price)
Doth so farrepasse all humane reason,
That he, whose hand would enterprise
Taugment your fame by his deserving quill,
Must either have much rashnesse or much skill.

Rash hee must bee, thus to purchase,
By his ignorance, shame and scorne:
Or skilfull, his vyorke by your grace,
And precious ornaments tadorne:
Sith sole Apelles or Praxiteles
Can the least parts of this Goddesse expresse.

£ 41

But yet my humble tongue dare fing
With devout voyce (hovefoever vveake)
Of you, great Goddesse, vertues spring,
Evn as men vse of Gods to speake. (praise:
For humble hearts by fevr vvords may give
But daintie speech can Gods not higher raise.

Hee is senselesse, that views your sight,
And (ravish'd) doth not blesse his chaunce;
But hee must be a godlie veight (glaunce.
That would praise well your Vertues
For as your name doth fill the eares with pleasure, (sure,
So your faire eyes fill soul's with Vertues trea):(3 Without

Without you, Beautie is not faire;
V Vithout you, Grace is vvithout grace:
Love, Honour, and Majestie rare
Doe delight in your godlie face:
And as your soule is Vertues pleasant bovver,
So is allone your bodie Beauties flower.

Thus, though you vvere bliffefully borne
Of Gods of doubly-royall blood,
Yet heavens bountie did adorne
Your mind with their farre dearer good;
So that to been great Princeffe by birth
Is the least praise you doe deserve on earth.

Othen, Germanie, doe rejoyce,
And acknowledging her defart,
Doe fing her praise with cheerefull voyce,
And sacrifice to her thy hart.
Our successelesses successours may be waite
Their too late life, when there such bliffe shall faile.

And you, Goddelle, doe not refule
This hymne, though farre too feant of art:
But, mild, doe you (our English Muse)
Such skill to Germanie impart,
That Germanie may England like bee found,
And with one hart and tongue your praise refound.

words W

TO THE READER.

Entle reader, Behold here a small booke norit-ten in English by a German, and printed in Germanie. Therefore if thou art too daintie a reader, I doe intreat thee, to feeke somewhere els fit food, to bee pleased withall, as, I know, there is greater store of in England, then in any other countrie. Asfor me, beeing fully acquainted with mine incapacitie, I willingly would crave pardon for this rude relation, if I did set it forth by boldnesse. But to obey the commandement of my Soveraigne (his Highnesse of Wirtemberg) Iwas gladto and the autity vest Engush, I had learned within three yeares, I lived in England. Therefore I pray thee, to take it in good part, and so, as I doe meane it, though I doe not Cay, well; and kindly to reforme by thy judicious reading the faults either of the erring author, or of the unwitting Printer, who, good man, never in his life faw, nor perhaps will see more English together. Thus I shall indever the more, to honour in German the gallant English Nation whereof (verely) I make more al count, then I can vitter (thoug with truth) without getting the name of a flatterer. Farewell.

THE FIRST CHAPTER.

h

be

7,

1

h

Z,

The arrivall of the straungers.

ERMANIE, thou haft neither

the cause of feare, nor of sorrovv. The love and friendship, vniting the most part of thy Princes, doeth fill thee more and ore both with securitie ad ioy. mie evident testimonies of. Among them ou doest remember (and wilt remember riaftingly) the extreame admiration and afure, thy heart did feele, to behold the maficence fer forth at Heydelberg, by the chie-Electour of thine Empire, to honour the vall of his (them nevv-comming) royall Novy the Prince of Wirtemberg, to ufe. ke to passe in some manner his desires, did sine replenish thy fight with marvells, thy mouth with congratulation, and thy soule vith gladnes. For the eternall rejoycing his ountrie, amongstinnumerable bleffings, with

Our all they best English, I had learned within three yeares, I lived in England. Therefore I pray thee to take it in good part, and so, as I doe meane it, though I doe not say, well; and kindly toreforme by thy judicious reading the faults either of the erring author, or of the unwitting Printer, who, good man, never in his life faw, nor perhaps will see more English together. Thus I shall indever the more, to honour in the gallant English I whereof (verely) I make more count, then I can otter (the with truth) without getting the name of a flatterer. Farewell.

THE FIRST CHAPTER.

The arrivall of the straungers.

Ea MANIE, thou haft neither cause of seare, nor of sorrovv. The love and friendship, vniting the most part of thy Princes, doeth fill thee more and more both with securitie ad ioy. There are manie evident testimonies of. Among them thou does remember (and wilt remember werlastingly) the extreame admiration and bleasure, thy heart did seele, to behold the manificence set forth at Heydelberg, by the chiefs Electour of thine Empire, to honour the trivall of his (them nevy-comming) royall bouse. Now the Prince of Wirtemberg, to take to passe in some manner his desires, did gaine replenish thy sight with marvells, thy nouth with congratulation, and thy soule with gladnes. For the eternall rejoycing his ountrie, amongst innumerable blessings, with the happie birth of a yong Prince, did withall affoord vnto him a fit occasion to expose to the view of all the world the treasure of his princely mind : which even as it defired nothing more fervently, then to give some plaine tokens of the true benevolence, hee beareth vnto all Princes, but especially to honour at his court the matchlesse Ladie Electrice, Princesse of Great-Brittaine, who by her most longedfor presence, had not, at that time, graced this place : so did it embrace vvith gladnesse this Thus her Highnesse, besides commoditie. th Elector Prince Palatine, and manie other German Princes vvere intreated t'affift the princely Christening, appointed vpon the tenth day of Mars last past.

The next day before (beeing the ninth) the heaven seeming to contribute to the common joy at fuch a magnificent and folemne congregation, there were gathered some seven or eight companies of vvell apparelled fouldiers vvithin Stutgart, the chieftovene of the daug Dukedome of Wirtemberg, and they were bilit ranged on both fides of the great street's, to the then end the entrie of straunger Princes could bee the better seene, and performed without any alla disorder.

Th'afternoone, my Prince and his bro-faire ther Levvis-frederic, accompanied with a hey great number of Lords and Knights (mounty)

ting

0

(2

ar

A

Ai th

th

ho

de

gen

qui

bro mo

Ma

vve

Bf E vyit sing to three hundred horses) with the sound of many trumpetters ad tabors on horsebacke (as the custome is to doe in this countrie) went out of the towne, to meet the Prince Electour and his Ladie; the Counte Palatine Iohn-Auguste Duc of Baviere; Prince Christian of Anhalt and his sonne, which all together with their traine had about five hundred horses, so that their entrie (my Prince beeing joyned with them) was at least of eight hundred horses.

Th'other my Princes his brother, Frederic-Achilles vvent an other vvay, vvith his gentlemen and trumpetters to meet the Marquis of Brandemburg Ioachim-Ernest, and his brother sohn-George, their vyholecompanie mounting to some two hundred horses. And Magnus, the youngest brother of my Prince vvent vvith his companie to meet the Marquis of Baden George-Frederic, vvho brought vith him his Ladie the Marquesse, his young daughter, and his three sonnes, and a brave nobilitie, so that all his entriedid consist of more then of source hundred horses.

All those Princes, vvaited on by manie

ĕ

All those Princes, venited on by manie allant Earles, Lords, knights and gentlemen ad arrive by times, in most rich apparell and faire order at Stutgart in the court, where they were hartily received and welcomed by most gracious Princesse; by the Ladie

A 2 Vrfule

Triumphall shevvs

Vrfule Widovv of Wirtemberg; and by the three Ladie Sisters of my Soveraigne, which with their other Ladies and gentlevvomen in great number filling all the spacious court, did content all eyes that looked on them : and then they vvereled into chambers and lodgings very richly furnished, as it was fit for them.

THE SECOND CHAPTER.

Of the princely Christening, and of the feast.

cleare and pure againe, and then the Sunne too

H's morning of the tenth day arising, did seeme as if Phoebus (moved by jealousie and anger, the brightnes of those Goddes. fesand Nymph's should fo fare passe his pale light) vyould cover his fight with clowdes, and the earth with teares But the skie, expecting no lesse pleasure the spledor of this Christian assemblie, grevy foor

perceiving none vyould bee forie for he for D

lig

ET

to

V

ou did

me

Lac

ire ell

rve the

buti isr

oun

brer

nig

000 ed v

nufi

ad i

the lter. reth

rmo

5

fight of those brighter sunnes. And verely it would be easier to describe the heaven, and to number the starres, then to shew in fit words the sumptuousnesse of this day. My soule was amazed with maryell: mine eyes did dazle: and all my senses were overwhelmed by the majestie, beautie, richesse, and magnificence of those brave Princesses, Princes, Ladies, Lords and Knights.

Therefore (and obedient to the commandement I have received) I leave all prolicitie, and doe intend onely (feconding the deire and curiousnesse of the speedie reader) to ell the principall exercises of chivalrie, that vere seene, and to give to this declaration no other ground but truth, nor other elegancie, outsimplicitie. Yet, that this day may have isright too, you must knovy, the Castlereounding of trumpets about nine a cloke in the Forencone, the Princes, Ladies, Lords, and Knights, to heare the word of God went in good order to the chappell, which was haned with rich tapistrie, and filled with a good music. Levvis-frederic Duke of Wirtemberg had then the honour to lead Myladie Elifahethsher hignesse. Ladie Anne, the yonger liter of my Prince, conducted by her two brethren Frederic-Achilles and Magnus, the fermon beeing allmost done, brought the little PrinPrince, that soone after was christened, and called Frederic by both his and her highned the Electors; by Marquis of Brandemburg Ioachim-Ernest; by Ladie Vrsule, VVidov of Wistemberg, in stead of Ladie Eue-Christine Duchesse of Wistemberg, and vvise to the Marquis Iohn-George of Brandemburg; and by George-Frederic Marquis of Baden, that all were godfathers and godmothers.

The fermon beeing done, all the Prince and Princeffes, waiting on Myladie Elifabeth brought heragaine unto her chamber, vyhen many princely gifts were bestowed upon th child. After this they went to dinner, which indeed was a most royall feast, where wer feene tyvo and tyventie princely wights fitting at one table: namely at the higher end Myladi Elisabeths herhighnesse allone : on the side a her right hand was the Elector: at his right hand the Marquis of Brandemburg Ioachim Ernest: and then was a roome for the gentle man caruer : After on this same side sate Pala tine Iohn-Auguste : neare him George-Fri deric Marquis of Baden : and then Princ Christian of Anhalt; and after him my Sout raigne: and novy there was againe a place fo th'other caruer : furthers on this fide vva Christofle Marquis of Baden: at his right han Christian the yonger Prince of Anhalt Nov at the Princestes her left hand, on that sie -citte fate the voidovo of Wirtemberg: hard by her the Marquesse of Baden: neare her my soveraine Princesse: and the the yong Ladie Anne-Auguste Marquesse of Baden: after her my soverains his three sisters, Ladie Agnes: Ladie Barbare: Ladie Anne: by her voas the Marquis of Brandemburg John-George: and surthers Frederic Marquis of Baden: neare him his brother Charles; and then Prince Levvis-Frederic Duke of Wirtemberg: and lastly at

Y

, an

hne

bun

dov

Chri

oth

and

ata

ınca

eth

hen

a th hid

ven

tin

adi

le a igh

ım

rtle

ala

Fn

inc

pue

fo

Ya

an

VO

fid

Car

Frederic-Achilles and Magnus together,
The commended shortnes (I must observe) will not give me leave to describe heere thother tables of the Earles and Lords.

the lovver end of the table both his brethren

None may doubte of the plentie of costlie meate, and any kind of daintinesse, and rich surveys of sountaines, images, beasts, and other prettinesse set upo the board, dressed most artisicially, no lesse as of several companies throne after throther, so that when the first (that did sound, after the Italian fashion, instrumets and voyces together) did finish, the second (playing according to the English manner with cornets and sack-botts) did beginne: and againe the end of this was the beginning of the third musicke, that was performed with a set of violing after the French aire.

The rest of this day, and like vise the supper was spent in all kindnesse and cheerefulnesse.

THE COUNTY OF TH

THE THIRD CHAPTER.

Of the maske.

HE supper beeing done, all Princesses, Princesses, and the gentrie event from the castle into the pallace in the garden, vyhere a great roome is in, that for beauties and largenelle sake scarce can bee compared. As soone as they were entred, a musicke of many instruments entertained the time till enery one was placed, and then source trompetters did appeare, in the shape of auncient Romans very brauely apparelled all in white satin, couered with gold and silver, their helmets garnished with great bunches of red, yellow, blevy, and white feathers. An other like dressed Roman followed, who did proclaime the ordinance, that (after the custome of German chevalrie) should next day bee kept at the running to the ring, and publish a challenge of King Priamus, that did desie all other knights, and would bee desendant against all aduenturers.

This beeing denounced, and every one falling agains to feede his eyes of that, hee did as pleasaunt as strange a sound of musicke, where all eyes were againe withdrawen by, so the place that resounded of. There they savy come in source hudge great, but also well formed heads, going the one after throther, and was each of them so bigg, that six men could bee therein at their case, and walks withall.

ın-

rie

al-

eat

nd

As

ny

ne

id

ry ed

d

0j-

e-ig

g

16

d

e

The first head was (as it were) a lodging of three Westerne nations : the second of three Northerlie : the third of three Eafterlie: and the last (and t'vvasa blacke moore) of three Southerlienations. Those foureheads after they had done three turnes about, stayed themselu's right ouer against the Princes, and there having made a lovy curtefie (inclining their monstrous noses to the ground) their confort of muficke, that was within, ceafed: and there came out of the first head, but one player on the lute allone, in a red fuit, allmost like an English shipman. To the found of his lute came forth after him a gentleman, that did represent th'English nation. His hat vvas white embrodered with filter, with a white feather, beeing the fashion of his habit, that vyas of vyhite iluercloth, as English Lorde vvere vvoonted to use some tvventie yeares He danneed a galliard after th linglish manner ; and as foone he was neare the Prince chat same head, at the sound of a drumme, an other Scottishman played on. Novv the Englishman seeing him come against him, began to daunce like vise after his fashion, and vvas the one on this, and th'other on that side, when they did see come out of that same head an Irish harper, to whose play followed an other Irishman, that by his dauncing caused the two first to imitate his sport too.

The second head (a develling place of three Northerlie nations) gave issue to a Frenchman, apparelled in carnation satin, and daucing a currantoe, that an other French sider, comming out with him, did play. After him hopped forth a High-Dutchman in a red dutch garment with pusses, his player was a fluter in like an apparelle. The third, that eame forth of the second head was a Laponian, covered with the skinne of a beare, and trampling about at the sound, such an other sellows of Lappie did tune with a sack-botte.

to

bi

in

hi

h

fo

The third head was bigg of a Spaniard, who came forth strouting and roaming most bravely, attired in a habit of purple layd with gold laces: his head and hands were richly fer in great russes. An other Spaniolized feleovy played his measures on a Bandora. The medical at Statement

加油の日

15

6,

e

Italian did follow, with his govene, even as a fignor Pantalone is commonly to bee feene at Venice: and an other played him with a guitterne a daunce, hee did performe with prettie tricks, when out of that fame head appeared the Polonian in a garment of blevy fatin, of his countrie shape, with his bag-piper, and caused all the foresayd nations to imitate his kind of dauncing.

A blacke a moore came out of the fourth head, richly adorned with jevvels about his armes, and an other one of that countrie played on a little tabor full of bells a measure after their custome. Then followed a Turkish piper, and an other Turke jumping to his play, brabled with his vnsheathed scimitar. Lastly came forth an Indian, or Americaine all bare and painted over his bodie, having onely a faire cloke of coloured feathers, and upon his head likewise a hat made of feathers. An other American made him moove to the straunge noise, hee made with a very big horne.

The eleven nations, that were come in before him, did presently counterfeix his demeanors and countenances, where hee proved by, to marvell much at their diversitie, and then the vyhole confort of their tyvelve musicians, with their feverall.

new daunce, which was lively and straingely performed by the maskers. And there shall bee knowne, that still one nation did imitate thother, so that hee, that was the Englishman, beeing the first, did counterfeit
the eleven nations, that came after him: hee that playd the Scottishman, tenne: the Irishman nine: the Frenchman eight, and so forth.
And this was as an entrie to thother dauncing, which even those twelve nations (as every one is accustomed to behold herself in th'other) beeing transformed in lookingglasse-makers have executed in manner as solloweth.

The foure great heads with their twelue nations were vanished, when a little house, like to a shop, covered with candles and looking-glasses came in, resounding of an exclient musicke with lutes and some voyces, which made the beholders understand this song.

Song.

Ladies, why doe you spend your leasure,
To be bold in a glasse your grace,
Sith Phabus self tak's all his pleasure
To be bold his face in your face?

And

made at Stutzart. men Lensis

And fish your glistering fight furned The brightness of all looking-glaffes?

ere

he ee

h-

h.

1-

as in

e

e

5

Tee, the wary mirrors of bewwie.

And of true honour, with great skill

Doese schools and men how their devel

Shall goe before their lustfull waill: (tie

Shewwing how your sights that furnalles

The luster of alllooking-glasses.

Therefore the gods, to bee partakers
Of your suveet looks full daintie glaunce,
Come to you like looking-glasse-mukers,
Beholding in you their bright dannee,
And your sight, that all lights surpasses
Is the glasse of their looking-glasses.

Out from the shop, staying before the Princesses, came a vyoman, as mistresse of the marchandise, attired in a vyhite satin govvne embrodered with gold, with curled haires spangled with gold and small looking-glasses. This vyoman delivered to the Electrices her highnesse, to the Electrices, and all other Princes, Ladies and Lords this sonnet, vyritten in English, German, and French:

Triumphab sheven

SONNET

THE LOOKING.

TO THE LADIES.

Vnto you daintie Nymph's, that by the daz-

of your sveet shining eyes doe all treafur's display:

Thatby wwonderfull look's of acelestiall might

Can gods and men at once both reioyce

Into you, by wwhose beam's this night is like the day,

Vreedoe offer our ware, that shews you your faire fight,

Eun as your brighter eyes, true micrors of delight, (gentleray.

Doe teach us vertues all but weithone

therefore Ladies most faire (wweepray) dae not disclaime.

Tradorne our wware and ws, wwith your heavenly glaunce,
Glaunce, that could the wwhole woorld wwithout the summe maintaine.

But if your look's should spoile our liberties perchaunce, Then kind doe graunt thus much, that

after this our dannee

VVeemay all withour shop at your feevice remaine.

ell

1

*

8

7

.

After this the shop passing againe to the lovver end of the roome, the violins (making a sonsort of tenne) beganne to play a new daunce, and then the Gods, vyho to honour this royall Elisabeth (that better deserveth to bee called the mirror of vyomen then that Elisabeth of Portingall) had disguised themselves in looking-glasse-makers, came forth from their shop. Those tyvelue (beeing three Princes, and other nine courtiers of my Prince) arrayed in blevy satin, and all covered with looking-glasses and gold, that the sight could not well behold them, excellently discharged their daunce, and siguring vyithall both

Triumphallsheves

both their highnesses mames ELISABETH and FREDERICH, ended it with many changes of musicke and measure.

THE FOURTH CHAPTES

OF (A) THE Prince lo and Tech Heyderl

sees c

TIGHTI

knights doe intid to make famous for viell by their gargets offentations, as by their grace and disposition.

Nove they are all busie, preparing themselves to please with their braveries these all-pleasing beauties. By honour they are called: by glory

ed v

lon

tin

gio

VΠ

ho rui

is a slory allured, and by valour they are conducted. Heaven it self joyfull at this public joy vnyvrinckleth and purifieth his fight, to behold the better these ceremonies. The people. runneth from all fides to the garden : there saftraunge crovvd : the scaffolds are full : fo are the trees : the tops and vvindovys of all houses and tovyr's thereabout are filled with pectarours. Toyis every vyhere. Silence itand Aiforder

TLY

e and fold. vvith

azed. hem, lifts.

re as aun-

vía-

gli-

ed with like colours, and nine trumpetters, ding three together, they were also after the oman faction drelled in white and greene tin, with feathers of both those colours.

Triumphallsheves

both their highnesses names ELISABETH and FREDERICH, ended it with many changes of musicke and measure.

THE FOURTH CHAPTER.

A COMENTRIE

OF (MY SOVERAIGNE)

THE HIGH AND MIGHTIE

Prince lohin-Frederic Duke of VVirtemberg

and Tecke, Counte of Mompelgart, Lord of Haydenheim: VVhonamed himselfe King

Priamus, and wwas sole defendant at the running to the

the mirror gairon en then

Has is the day, our vyorthies and knights doeinted to make famous fo well by their gorgious oftentations, as by their grate and disposition. Novy they are all busie, preparing themselves to please with their braveries these all-pleasing beauties. By honour they are called: by glory

ted. Heaven it self joyfull at this public joy vnyvrinckleth and purifieth his sight, to behold the better these ceremonies. The people runneth from all sides to the garden: there is a straunge crovyd: the scassolds are full: so are the trees: the tops and vyindovys of all houses and toyyr's thereabout are silled with spectatours. Ioyis every vyhere. Silence it should cause some hinderance: Love and devytie doe gather all eyes at the scassold, where the royall Princesse hath her seat yith other Princes and Ladies.

The beholders overe all ready amazed, but a found of many trumpets recalled them, to turne their fight to the opening of the lifts,

where they favy come in

IE

rg of

d 6 5,

トラアソ

First six Troyan knights (that were as masters over the sield) attired after the auntient Roman fashion, in blevy and yellovy sain, layd with silver laces, their head peeces glitering of gold and silver, and covered with great yellow and white feathers.

After them came a blacke moore, that played on the drummes on horsebacke, covered with like colours, and nine trumpetters, iding three together, they were also after the koman fathion dressed in white and greene atin, with seathers of both those colours.

B Tyvo

gether (that else very seldome can bee seene)
namely VERTUE and FORTUNE. The apparel of that vvas rich, and her facelike to the sunne;
she had in her right hand a svvord, and in he left hand a booke. Fortune vvas half bare, he rayment vvas rayed, of all colours, and flying about, her horse vvas like a vvatter sull of a kind of cockles, shells and fishes.

Theirtvvo vvaiting vvomen did ride af & ter them, every one dreffed in her mistresse colours and shape.

After them mooved a prettie hill, where upon were seene manie beasts and birds aliue wand then came a sweet garden, where the nine business werein, playing every one on her instrument, where with they made a good consort of musicke.

Hector, the horrour of the Greeks vvas the innext that appeared upo his proud steed, armed most gallantly: a red lyon vvas painted on his his hield, hee did beare at his lest arme: and his pright hand did hold the svord, that so many intimes had shortned the hope of the Grecians by by cutting the thread of their life. At his one is side vvas Troilus, and on th'other Deiphobus es both very bravely attired, and armed with an shields and launces.

Three servants came after in white and engreene apparell layd with filver.

And then did follow a popous triumpha he made at Stutgare.

was fulfained by foure rich pillers, very artificially cut, and well filvered over.

This chariot was round abour decked with faire hangings, and adorned with fiveet flowers, beeing the axletree, the wheeles and lying all the outfide skillfully framed, and with filter and blevy flourished.

Mercusing with a golden canopie, that was fulfaired and with a golden canopie, that was fulfaired and with faire hangings and adorned with fiveet flowers, beeing the axletree, the wheeles and lying all the outfide skillfully framed, and with filter and blevy flourished.

Mercurius with winged head and heeles, leaf. & holding in his right had his poverfull staffe resse vyound with snakes, had the charge to guide the foure horses, hee had borrovved (Idoe here thincke) of Apollo, to draw this chariot: They live event together, and were bravely trimmed, nine beeing all their furniture covered with small fire golden starres, and having upon their heads & for truppers great bunches of red, vvhite, and yelovy feathers. Some footmendid runne along the dreffed in like colours of old Roman fashion.

In the middest of this chariot did sit the his three (once very angry, but at that time vvell his ppeased) goddesses Venus, Pallas & Iuno. The anjoint vvas knowne by her grace and beautie, & ans by her vvanto boy: the second by her glistering on nead-peece and launce: the last by her proud out seacocke, and by her ovvne prouder behaviour id endofteració: becing each of che arrayd in fuch maner, whereby their estate and glorieshould me either beeabated, nor could beemistaken.

Behinde them upon a higher feat did appeare he Troyan Monarch, royally apparelled : he bare in his hand a golden scepter, and upon his head a golden helmet, where did vvaver upon a plume of manie faire colours.

THE TOTAL SPECIES

Three Knights vyaiting on the three Goddesses came after the vyaggon, very gallantly clothed in the colours of their Ladies.

Then vyent allone the faire Paris. His hand was provided of his boyv, his fide of a quiver full of arrows, his horse with greene and white furniture of satin, and with feathers of the same two colours. His counted nance shewed more mirth then repentance to have made more account of sweet Love then of troublesome Knowledge and of idle Richesse. Like wise the faire Helena, following after him in a rich attire of red and white satin, did discover more love then a warice.

The too-renovemed Achilles, very brave, was also glad, forsaking all his friends to bee wher of the undefiled beautifull Polyxena, who did ride next after him, dressed in greene, white and yellows satin, her horse beeing likewise adorned, and (as all other horses were, that went before) milkewhite.

Her brother Helenus, and her lifter Callandra vvent after her all in blacke, riding upon blacke horses. The reason I doe not knove but, perhaps, that they were sorie for the falls report against them.

Moreouer there came fix fquires, bearing

laun

au

or byt

made at Stutgart.

aunces and shields, all bravely attired in the orefayd colours, stuffes, and feathers.

And lastly fix generous horses were led by the hand of so manie Troyanservants.

nt 2

te4 CE

Ve dld 0 110

ery ds xe in rfe or-

un

Novy to make this Monarchs his intent o bee knowne, Ivvill fet dovvne the letter of defiance, hee caused to bee published the night when themaske wasplay'd, and that I doe english thus.

al Lucinian state, automitis

Victorion the notknow in hey were oriefor thefall ella

White the board of the Mere our their came (in tentres bearing and

All policies of diagrapor no

zogranicograni

DEFIE.

PRIAMVS, THE SONNE OF THE CREAT LAOMEDON, KING OF TROTE, LORD OF THE INVINCIBLE Phrygians, a true paterne of worldlie alteration, and the very roote of manie a real me and raigne in Europa, sendeth greeting to all those never-enough-praised and inviolable Ladies

and the vnvanquishable Knights af-

to bee very needfull a well for the bonour and reputation of mine owne, as of you who doe boast to be emy successours to make the world know the wrong, both land you, wee doere ceive by the fables inveted and scat

tera

made at Stutgart. veriters, that doeper suade thereader, asif in time past, by mine pune needlesse instigation & heed-lesse presumption I had no lesse de-E served as caused the vittermost de-Aruction and losse of my crowne, of my vvise, children and whole suband stance. Therefore I did noish long dies agoe to get a fit occasion, vvhere I might prove by, how the overt i wveening Greeks (Stirring indeed es, and weee not them to warres) have beene by our Troyan povverfull arm's (and not vveeby their armies) overco me and vndone: & how that long time since, aftermy death, the Troya Realme did attaine unto the last defection, B 4 wwhere

! a

104

ers

10

Triumphallslieves nobere all estates are subjected un G to, by the unrecallable and inextri m cable lavu of Destinie. None at (nay if even a Grecian himselfe with a Creetish speech vyould ce sundertake it) can truely contra-v dictit. For tumost manifest, hove m the gallant estate of Greece (howv-re foever esteemed for wissedome) is G thus vuholly vanished, that there no resteth nothing of. Contrarie-m wife, I have yet reason (the gods de bee thancked for it) rather to re-ki joyce then to griefe at my chaunce, fo feeing the great number of blessings, w the heavens provvred out upon ch my seed, whence are descended for F. manieever-florishing nations: as the Stout Britans, the valiant made at Stutgart. m Germans, the couragious French rimen, the circums pect Sicilians, the e advised Venetians, and others. But to the end that of all these els certainties no doubt may remaine a-vvithin you, I, having for saken my long-enjoyed rest, am againe v-returned (by the permission of the u Gods) into this wworld, accomparemied of the three Goddesses, and of e-my children and friends, beeing all described to doe you any kindnesse and service, so that hence-, forth yee dare not bee afraid to have 8 vivant neither of honour and riches, which funo and her servants 7 ô Hector, Deiphobus and Troilus will bestown on you: nor of skill 8 and vertue, Pallas, and herfollo-Triumphall shevvs evers Helenus and Cassandra doctor depart: nor of beautie, love and joy, me Venus and her Knights Paris and Achilles, es withall their beloved Helena and Polyxena doe inted to the fauouryou of. Moreouert increase be your pleasure, and to confirme my sh wwords the more, Idoepurpose, to appeare to morroww (the eleventh ca day of Mars) about noone in the fe tilt-garden, and there running fu tothering (an exercise first invented at Troye as the fondation of chevalrie) to performe with any knight, of wwhat a nation soever beebee, three careeres, for a price, that bee worth neither leffe then tenne, nor more then hundred dollars (according to the adventumade at Stutgart. torers his ovune choice and pleasure) maintaining & proving withall, the thing happeneth to man, but what afe hee deserveth, and wwhat once my shall become to his behalfe. 2. Inthe second careere, None can have the title of wworldlie perfection, without the begetting of a successour, of vuhom both his countrie and the gods may bee served and bonoured. 3. And therefore (in the third careere) that vvomankind (framed of flesh, and not of filthy earth as men are) shall (next after the gods) before and above all living soules bee beloved and vvorshipped.

2

4

tr

Triumphall sheves 4. And lastly (joyntly in a I three career's) that Ladies or knights doe never misse t'obtain their desires, if they are directed to faithfulnesse and honestie, and af O ter the measure of reason: But A if they are doubledealers, and vvieked, they deserve the hatred and in curse both of Gods and . er ber reinigd om reldonants gr frough the victim accordance with region dame and thrope of the Server L. Alrica ... pay bed relieve most determination called the 是國家到北京國際影響

THE FIFTH CHAPTER.

ENTRIE

OF THE MOST-HIGH,

MIGHTIE AND EXCELLENT Prince Frederic, Prince palatine of the Rhine, Chief-Elector of the holy Roman Empire, Duke of Baviere, and Knight of the most auncient & noble order of the Garter, Scipio of Africa.

to 11-disposed his traine vvithin the rayles, when a new sound of trumpets did denounce the arrivall of an adventurous com-panie. It was the noble young Scipio, who, though he would cover himfelfe with the name and shape of that Scipio of Africa, may neverthelesse most deservedly bee called the ia

re

he

ft

ed

163 ib

y

cal

T

ne

he

ar

15 n

ar

no

German Scipio, fith the deeds of his w youth caused allready this wide Vnivers bee too narrovy for the renoveme of the vict ries , the Destinies doe graunt and presen onely to his courage and valor.

Novy did hee appeare in chisorder.

First came a blacke moore on horseback playing on tabors, that were covered with red farin, layd with filver. Hee was followed by fix trumpetters, riding three together: the heads were adorned with greenegarlads, and their bodies with Roman habits of red, and with filver embrodered fatin : their trumpet vverevvound and very long, as the Roman in yvere vyont to yfein timepaft.

And then came tyvo elephants, covered with rich hangings of red fatin with filverembrodered, each of them was governed by a moore, tel that fate vpon.

A most statelie triumphall vvaggon, framed after the auncient fashion, mooved after : the wheels, the axletree, the bulcke, & the whole worke, bravely carved, were all guilded over, and laoden with a great number of preciouspots, and manie kind of golden veffels, and other costlie spoyle, and also was there to bee seene the figure representing the cittie of nevy Carthago, as it was when it did profper

After this vvaggon came three Efquires beating trophies; and three more, having great gilded lged shields, all bravely clothed after the incient Roman fashion, their garmets beein rich nade of red fatin, and embrodered with filver fen ney did ride vpon faire horses, which were keyvise finely trimmed, and adorned with reat feathers of white and red colours.

After them event fix musitians playing ack vie vveetly on lutes and violins ; they had vpon heir heads faire garlands of baye, & the shape he ftheir garments vvas Roman-like, the ftuffe an ed fatin layd with filver.

ers

and ith

re

ed

he

ole

0-d.

15, 0

of f,

-

1

Nextafter them did ride an old knight, and per next him aladie, both beeing arrayed in red an Indfilver. They were (I doethincke) the Celiberian Princes his father and mother.

Then came an other triumphall chariot, vero ry high, and most artificially framed, and extellently bloffomed & adorned with tapiftrie, filverand gold, and covered with a gliftering canopie, where lustice had herseate under. This goddesse vvas gorgiously imbellished: neare her vvere tvvo angells thatdid vvaite on her : before her upon the waggon stood her arch-adversarie, called Iniurie, vvhose divellish face, and poylonous looks would have affrighted the beholders, if her imprisonment, and her ferters had not beene to them a vvarrant of securitie. The fire of hatred and malice, notasthen quenched, vvas troublesome so

none butto this monsteritselfe.

The

The royall vyifes and children of Ma donius and Indibilis, covered with black garments, drevy and conducted this charion

After them followed three, I took them to bee Magon, Afdrubal Barchinus, an Afdrubal Guifgons his forme, each of them beeing gallantly arrayed in red fatin, imbrode red with filver; and well horfed, with like furniture.

Moreover there vvent both the happy and thankefull Prince Luceius, his loving beloved riding at his side, bravely attired in embrodered fatin.

Then came two fquires, bearing faire shields, and beeing well furnished with both colours of red and filver, and like feathers.

Next after them vvent fix Romand Knights, attending on the brave Scipio. They did carrie filver axes and rods, as it was the cuftome to bee carried before Romane Confuls.

Conqueror. His armour vyas of red, and filver ennamell, enriched with precious stones, and formed at the Romane fashion. His side was provided of his dreadfull sword in a richly glistering sheath: his head of a sumptuous helmer; overshadowed by a great wavering bunch of red and white feathers: his victorious hand of a scepter of gold, where a golden hand of a scepter of gold, where a golden hand of a scepter of gold, where a golden hand of a scepter of gold, where a golden hand of a scepter of gold, where a golden hand of a scepter of gold, where a golden hand of a scepter of gold, where a golden hand of a scepter of gold, where a golden hand of a scepter of gold, where a golden hand of a scepter of gold, where a golden hand of a scepter of gold, where a golden hand of a scepter of gold, where a golden hand of a scepter of gold, where a golden hand of a scepter of gold, where a golden hand of a scepter of gold and scepter of golden hand of a scepter of golden hand of a scepter of golden hand of a scepter of gold and scepter of golden hand of a scepte of fure lervice, and like ville trimmed with a cost lie saddle, and furniture of red and with filver and pearles embrodered) feeling the worthinesse of his sweet renovemed burthen, did (bragging, as it were, of it) as if it would, despising the ground, beare himselfe up by his owne courage, might and oftentation in a higher element.

ot. ook an hen

ode.

like

ppy

be

em-

aire

oth

and

hey

CU-

ls.

reat

Vet

and

Vas

gli-

icl-

ing

len ece

of

derford.

The valiant Lælius did ride at his right fide: and the most martiall Martius at his lest hand, both armed alike, in Romane armours of red and silver, with like furnitures and sea-

thers of both colours vpon their horfes.

After them vvent their three squires, adorned and furnished vvith like colours, no lesse sumptuous as delightfull to the eye, their horses beeing of a gray colour, as vvere all the foresayd horses of this entrie.

Lastly vvere by eight Romanes, going a foote, led eight horses, vvho by the lustinesse, and comelinesse of their limmes, and by the treasure of their furnitures did much increase the magnificence of this triumphall shevy.

The challenge of Scipio, or rather the declaration of this triumph, as it years delivered to the Ladies and Judges in German and French, I doe english thus.

C THE

THE RETVRNE

P. SCIPIO OF AFRICA.

LUCEIUS

and spectatours.

Eeing the borders of m countrie not ample e nough to comprehend the very royall vertues and the most deserved praises of

Scr

t

t/

fe

OCI

pee

do

not

Atro

hao

ade at Stutgart. Scipio: I (wwho have received of him, vehat man can ever exfeet from all the Gods, namely my love, dearer unto meethenmy life) fam resolved, thankfully to goe with him (returning from the brave conquest of nevv Carthago) and to publish through. all this Univers, his morthie feates of armes and of mind. To the better performance wwhereof t could woush for no fitter occasion, but this most honourable assemblie, which this peerles Conqueror himselfe doeth intend to falute, and to honour by his triumphall entrie, illu-Strated by the same spoyles, hee. had (once) gotten at the conquest

Trsumphall shevus of the new cittie of Carthago, & fent by Lælius to Roome. Novv therefore by the declaration of this she ov of his, I doe hopetomake a small demonstration of his great glorie, which hee deserveth, not like a man-like knight, but rather as a god-like might, who is able to conquer as mell the soules as bodies of men: his bo grace and kindnesse beeing no lesse th prompt to pardon, and desirous to releeve the thraldome, and to reward the obedience of subjects, as de his hand is ready and affured to subdue and to destroy the pride of those, that dare to withstand or th despife humight. Then first there doe come my bi made at Stutgart.

father and mother (remembring the especial favour they received of this Demygod by the restoring of my love and life) to acknowledge in some manner their gratefulnesse.

Likevvise doe there appeare manie other Romane knights, to worship their Generall, vvhose bountie is vvont te remunerate their valor, as his valor doeth preserve theirfaithfulnesse.

e

-

e u

18

This great maggon, overloaden with spoyles, doeth (asit were) complaine by his cracking, of his weaknesse, wnable to carriescarce the smallest portion of the prey gotten within the cittie. And werely shis but as a very small scantling of

of the richesse, weeleft behind us, where the number is infinite of, to won, of greatrammes, lings, and other battering war-like engines, speares, partisans, javelins, launces, pikes, armours, standards, vesfells of gold and situer: Store of corne, metall, braffe, coyne, and other stuffe convenient for building: but principally innumerable faire Vellels, ships, and barkes, so that the cittle it selfe could be accounted the least part of the bootie.

After you will see Ivs TICE (daughter of heavenly Peace, and mother of all Vertues) sitting veron a higher waggon and glorified by all soules, for the favour, sheet shee bestowveth on mankind, punishing that monster of INIVstice: and even by this reason, the royall wrifes and children of Indibilis and Mandonius (delivered from the Tyrannous yoake of the Carthagoniens) are glad to conduct this waggon.

As for the most noble Conqueror, bee appeareth, according to his desert, as an Emperour, beeing waited on by the chiefest noble

Romanes.

US,

to

nd

es,

in-18/-

of

na

ub

26-nd

ف tof

CE

nd

7 ri-

66

Meere him doe ride the two hardie Lælius and Martius, as beeing neerest to him by their merits and renovume: the one having proved his doughtie C 4 youth

Triumphallshewvs

youth often before his fight: and the other beeing most famous by the manie victories, but especially by the overthrown of some 37000, men in Asdrubal and Magoni to hoast.

But novv our morthie Conquerour, to prove the respect hee beareth to those most vertuous and most beautiful Ladies, hee commeth (desirous tincrease their recreation) to direct the point of his launce against the ring, sinding no other object for it at this time, and vithall to maintaine following articles.

I. That hee, that can trust onto his overne Vertue, may to ede at Stutgart. and not grudge at the glorie of an o-2. Whosoever affecteth to eon ternize his name, es to lift his fame above the skie, hee must beginne on in his Touth to travell upon the e vvearisomehill of vertue. 3. That a brave captaine re-needeth not to stay for the comthis ming of his foe, but shall rather no leeke him in his ovvne countrie, nd beeing much better to prevent, then ing to beeprevented.

by her.

m-

4. That a vvorthie caest ptaine shall never purchase any ay tittle or dignitie, whereby the lavo

Traumphausnewes and good customes may bee viola ted: but rather maintaine the greatnesse and quietnesse of his countrie, following thexample

made at Stutgart.

THE SIXT CHAPTER.

mple

HE

ENTRIE

MIGHTIE PRINCE, GEORGErederic Marquis of Baden and Highberg, Lantgrave of Sousenberg, Lord of Re-

Representing Germanie.

teln and Badevviler,

ONE hath reason to doubte of the excellencie of Germanie. The courage and cunning of this nation is most notorious. Our ennemies and envious themselves can not denie it to bee vyorthie of hankes for th'invention as yvell of gunnes, as of that art of arts, vyhereby all learning, histories, names and praises of vyorthie men, yea of the Gods themselves are involled in the booke of Eternitie.

Notveithstanding this most renovemed Nymph

Nymph doeth not grov proud of it; but he ring of this joyfull affemblie of her Pring shee defireth her owne selfe to salute then And beeing all ready before the tiltgardens Stutgart, shee did send by one of her nymphe this kind letter in stead of a challenge.

LETTER.

Ermanie, the noble and famous Nymph, and voith her tenne other Nymphes, her best friends, to the most honourable Ladies, like voil to the Lord Judges, and to all the gallant Cavaleeres at this court, doe voish all happinesse.

Though it pleased God, to bequeathe upon mee more beautie of greatnesse, then upon anie other Nymph who Tymph of this world, adorning then the Romane Empire: Tet must mph confesse, to have altready too often lte the truth of our proverbe: PIGHT AND ENVIE GOOD FORTVNE. For my foes gathering their ancrength, bave not onely often times and tempted to wast mine Estate by the ontinual molestations: but they theid alfolately bring into my counvijerie a most execrable monster, the phose horrible fiercenesse and rage urt, id threaten the ottermost destrution of all I doe possesse. But since it did please that studessed friend of mine, the most pouverper rodio a mph dames powverfull CONCORD (wwho absence is no lesse harmefull, the ber presence is fruitfull to mee) promote by her owne hands m reskeve, and that by her assistant I have nove this monster take prisoner: I thought it to bee conve nient to bring it hether, that might receive his most deserve punishment by the just judgement and in the fight of this most excel Vent affemblie of my Lords and friends.

Thus befeeching you t'accept and to dispose of at your discretion, and commending my dear friend Concord, and my sevent Nymphes as well as my selfe unto the most of the contract of the contr

our perpetuall love and favour the vivee doe rest Your ever affectionnate friends s m and the tenne Nymphs of her countries (vvee doe call circles)

GERMANIE

ake

ati

rue 85775)

remen many ands

ccep

Cre 213/40 m

unt the win the ear men

YOU MAY

xca the circle of

- . Th'Electorship Palatine,
- 2. Elect. of Saxonie.
- 3. Austrie.
- 4. Burgundie.
  - 5. Franconie.
- 6. Baycere.
- 7. Suevie. A coult the
  - 8. High Palat. of Rhine
  - 9. Westphalie.
- 10. Lovy Saxonie,

The vyhole congregation was much rejoyced at the arrivall of so gentle a Nymphers but especially the stout Scipio, the severe Pris mus, and the Lord judges, who prefent sh commanded the opening of the lifts, who me theyfavvridein

First fix trumpetters apparelled in carm tion fatin, and white filver cloth, vpon white to horses, with carnation furnitures.

After them came two knights, as man shalls of the field, very richly adorned with fo jevvells and great golden chaines.

Next vvent five Nymphs, playing on cor nets, attired in carnation bodies, and filverper icoats.

Then did appeare the still-victorious Empresse Germanie. Her bodie vvas covered most stately with a govvne of carnation sain combrodered all over with filver : she had vpon her head a golden crovvne, in her right hand an imperial fcepter, and in her left hand a golden globe. Her steed vvas likevvise bra vely furnished of carnation fatin embrodered with filver, with white and carnation feathers.

Shee vvas followed by the Nymphes of her tenne circles. Their bodies vvere car nation satin, embroder'd with filver, their pet ticoats of cloth of filver : their heads quaintly fet with treffes, jevvells, and flovvrs. Each of then made at Stateart. mud hem had in her hand a round scutcheon, mph wherin the armes of her countrie were pain-Priced. Their horses (and all throthers of this fent shevy) beeing white, did praunce with furniwhere wes of carnation with filver, and with high feathers of both colours. The next that appeared after, vvas Conwhit cord, a Nymph, though more limmed then others are, yet beautifull. mat. For shee had (to bee more circumspect) vvid foure faire faces, and as manie more armes. The one of her right hands did hold the globe con of the voorld: the other the ruling scepter: the rper third the punishing syvord, and the fourth the victorious speare. Her left hands vvere busie rion to hold the incorruptible shield, where (me vere thought) I favy graven in these two words: fatin CONCORDIAINVICTA. Thehorfe shee had rode vpon vvas gallantly trimmed with a furight niture all embrodered of filver and carnation. and Shee did bring beforeher, bound and going a bra-foot, her arch-adversarie DISCORD; an abered hominable monster, his shape beeing like a featman, but having infinite faces, armes and legg's. hes Lastly five Nymphs, apparelled in like car colours, brought as manie horfes fumptuously

pet furnished.

еп

As foone as this odious monster came h o before those Ladies, who by their beautie and vertue (true nurses of love & peace) make starve both hatred and vvarre; it vvould faine (full of falsehood) have men persuaded, as if it did repentat his vvickednesse. But it vvasin vaine. For the povverfull beames of their faire eyes; the forcible presence of these vvorthies, vvho alltogether by this time doe professe themselves Germans; the vvisedome of the sudges; and the generally-aggreeing curse of the beholders brought this beast to his vitermost ruine, that it did fall before them all into despaire, restoring his damnable soulear gaine to hell, as the place of his birth.

Germanie most glad for it, presently caused this song to bee published.

Song.

Great is my ioy, small is my care

Evinnove that nothing more I feare,

Since that my foe

By the loss of his might

Beginneth my delight,

And ends my veoce

Righ

made at Stutgars.

Right heavie was to mee the paine
My gentle Nymph's safe to maintaine;
But Concord strong
By her united skill
Could soone this monster kill,
And stop his wurong.

maki

faine

their

VOI-

prone of curfe

is vt-

ilea

ently

A gainst such a monster to stand
None is able, worthout the hand,
And counsell wrise
Of Concord help him fight:
Concord, whose praise shin's bright
Above the skies.

Since that our foe
By the losse of his might,
Beginning our delight
Doth end our voe.

THE

Triumphall shevus

52

THE SEVENTH CHAPTER.

FIRST SHEVV

OF THE HIGH AND mightie Prince Lewis-Frederic Duke of Wirtemberg.

ynder the name

Of Lucidor Knight of vnspotted Love.

HE death of this monster of Discord had even satisfied the harts of the beholders for of just vengeance, when heavenlie wight (as it seemed Indges, and to thother Demy-gods a paper containing thus much.

LVC

made at Stutgart.

LVCIDOR

REGENT OF

THE ISLANDS AMA= NUTHVNT, CYPRVS, PAPHOS, ric and Cytheree , Knight and protectour of the oddesse Venus, and of her sunne Cupid, to all monarches, lords, and knights, also to all Princesses, nymphes and ladies at this court, vvisheth accomplishment of their desires.

ot-

ter o

Enus, the goddesse, of true and faithfull love, Geeing that mortall men wvere growvne hus bold (not with standing they hen had received of the gods a free will Los to doe vvell or evill, to follow their pap good or bad angells, to aspire unto glorie or reproach) they did not feare (meaning their shameful actions to excuse) most blasphe mouslie to accuse her divinitie, so that shee beeing suspected like a sinne-fult creature vvas m ny simple and fearefull soules, did considering my deserts, choose mee for her knight, to repaire and to defend her honour. Wherefore having resolved, passelfing through all the vvorld, to inquire after her foes and for due punishment to destroy them vitierly, I had allready of fectuated my purpos allmost in the vubole univers, yet nei ther found any place, where made at Stutgart. not this sveet goddesse was duely eful ovorshipped, nor any suffibhe eient opposition or hinderance to e, refresh both her and my hart ke with a most juste and pleasing s in vengeance, so that I was no ma lesse troubled by the receit and ules, conveying avvay of palmes, as oof by the purchasing thereof. Novv re bad vvee comming againe from ere-America, Africa and Asia af scarce reached the isle Sicilia, into tending to rejoyce us after that for journey, upon the pleasant hill em Erix, wohen all-telling Fame, after the publication of my name in this countrie, comei ming backe did informe us of D 4 the Triumphallshevvs of the most excellent affembly of form Knights, as incomparable beau le ties, at this Charitinian court n Those tidings did with exceeding h joy move vs, not onely to rehearle f the service, the chiefest wights of a this congregation doe bestouve on g true and pure love: but also to take n our iourney bether without any d delay, with this our traine though n small, but a shevv vvell shevving not the undefiled purenesse of our god-n desse, intending to trie all exercises le of chevalrie, set forth to the glorie and pleasure of the Ladies. The o length of our voyage, and the t shortnes of time could not graunt, t what this never-enough-praised a made at Stutgart. for companie both for her and our and fates sake doth require: Nevertheau lesse the goddesse calling all this to urt mind, did not forget her power, ling but did call the third celestiall arfoliphere (where shee is vovoonted to s of abide in) to come dovvne, and to e on goe before her, denoucing, sheecomake meth with her sonne, upon the my delectable hill Erix, quickening & igh mooving it in stead of a triumfall ing wag gon, resounding by the instruod-ments of many thousand chastlyses loving soules, that live in eternall ril mirth: but her foes, that either he didmisuse or despise her grace, are he the unworthie trophies of herworthinesse, pressed by her feet, accored dingunto their misdeeds. MoTriumphallshevvs ouer, to prevent alldoubts of her c faith-loving allmight, I was glad fil the godly Soprosin A, bearing we the crowne of eternitie should at or companie meonmy right side, and re OLETRIA (which to deceive the Soules, cloacketh oftentim's her to lewdnesse with the faire name of co fotted hart (hovesoeuer subjet cted to Cupids arrows's) rejecting still her beastly sensualitie. As g for mine expert squire Phronan der (vuhose prudence is the very witnes of my deeds) I disposed in him betweene the two attent ding vvomen of my both contraril companions, namely the inviolable made at Stutgark he Calofila, and the lascivious Eshrolad fila. The three Graces (beeing still ring with love, and love never without them) doefollowy, to give unand reprovable testimonie to their Goddesse, with their owne lipps, that never doe sever but with true her tove, and loving truth. The inconsiderate old-man Loth: therepenting David: Hercules the vainquisher of monsters: the matchles Salomon: Alexandre the great overcomer of the vvorld:

34 Triumphall shevvs

Calo- f

Pope Alexandre, the imposter of foules, and impoisoner of bodyes: the unsatiable Dagobert: and Solyma 2 the threatner of heaven and earth, beeing all together slaves of love must extolt true love, and shamefully blush at their ovene foolish rumphall shevus acts and villaine abuses. Also did the Vertues send unto me three of their knights, namely Wisedome, Es Valor did send SOPHRODROT Strength and Constancie, An. DRISTATOR: and Temperance and Prudence METRIPHRON.

vubich alltogether are no lesse resolved, then I my self am assured, to maintaine and to prove, That entire Love, beeing a mother and anurse of all Vertues doe revvard ber servants not with carnal pleasure; but with the crowned Vertue, and that it bee but one thing, well to love and well to live. Thus excellent are the wwork's of chaft love. Tour evident wisedome (most vvorthie) jud-

made at Stutgart. did udges) will us to spare more ee of words, and the praiseworthie lonne ging of those conquering beauties vvhose harts doe keepe the pudiitie of Diana, as their eyes doe exance pose the modest boldnes of Venus) doeth bid vs, to dilay no longer our re-entrie, Which to performe (may it d, to please you) were are no lesse ready, en as desirous to honour and to serve and the vuhole heroicall and divine ard companie, unto vuhose favor I most affectionnately doe recome of mend mee

LVCIDOR.

THE

Trumphallsheves

He judges having this veriting per used, did graunt his request willing and ly, and so there vyent in the lists

Formost this same, that has white delivered the letter, representing the third her and venliesphere, ruled above by the Goddessed ved love : horseand man vvere all blevy over, ful oldi offmall starres.

Next after him rode Phronander, hi head was covered with a glittering helmer don with red, white, blevv and yellow feathers hape Hee caried a banner painted with a Serpent real about a garland of laurell, with the words plot SERVAT PRUDENTIA LAURUM. Infur his shield hee had painted an eye, the tokeno rvee circumspection. His horse was trimmed with toph cloth offilver, and with feathers of many co-was lours.

Beside him rode vpon an vnicome the with maid Calofila, in a white fatin gov vne, layd rov with filver laces. The standard shee bare key vvas red and beautified with the picture of aces the Elyfian field, and these words: Fir mul whi AMOR ANIMARUM VITA. vhi

On theother fide vvas Eschrofila riding land vpon a filthie goate, vvhose hornes vvere guil art ded : herrayment red, with filver laces, ven treat rich and vvanton : her banner yellovy, pain- ed a ted with the paines of hell, and this writing! FICTUS AMOR ANIMARUM MORS.

Aftq

ver

bmp

ker

vith

After them vvent Phronanders squire, and the two vvairing-vvomen of his both ompanions. The one was clothed all in white, crowvned with bay, and bearing in her and a branch of bay: Th'other was adorted with a brave rayment of red and greene, olding in her hand a looking-glasse, as the hi Next after v Next after yvent the hardie knight Luet idor; armed sumptuously afterthe Romane shape, the plume wagging woon his shining reast yvas vvhite, blacke, and yellovv. Like solours bare his steed, that vvas trimmed vvith furniture of cloth of gold. Hee did ride beophrosina, and the vyicked Oletria. That was in an apparell of white satin embrodered with gold: she vvas crovvned vvith bay and with many jevvells, and did carrie a golden rovvne in her hand: her horse vvas surnished kevyise vvith vvhite satin, layd vvith gold ices, and adorned vvith great posses of red and vhite roses. Thothers array vvas of red and vhite enriched rovith gold is sheet had in her white, enriched with gold: shee had in her and a bare sword thrust through a bloudie art : her horse was proudly strouting with reat peacoks feathers, and with a furniture of ed and gold.

After them went the three Graces: they were richly arrayed at that time. I doe thinke, either their shamefastnesse, or the shame the sail would have, if they should bee foundi gracelesse before those gracefull beauties, die keepe them from comming (after their vyoon ted manner) naked. They made a sveet mu ficke with their instruments and voyces, fin ging thus much.

Triumphalishevus

SONG.

An armed knight can wwith his launce Getting the victorie, growve glorious: But LOVE with a sveet-darting glaunce, Is little, bare, and blind over all knights vi Etorious.

That the eyes of ladies doe the hart Vainquishby look's, t'is most notorious: But more appear's LOVE withhis dart Both of bodie and soule, of men and mail victorious.

That the gods doerule by their might Th'elements, t'is no lesse notorious:

BA

bear appa

fter

red v

heir

forn

ning

her ling

of t

rnd

gett

CTOV

he sutlittle LOVE boast's wwith more right, die Tobee of heav nandearth, of sea and aire victorions.

on.

ce,

E G Then event the good old man Loth, bearing a great booke e King David royally pparelled, with his harpe : Samfon with hejavy of the affe : Hercules , vyhofeshoulders were provided with the Lyons skin, and hishand with his club : Salomon in a long garment of gold: the great Macedonian in an mament of blevv embrodered with gold: he Pope in a stole of a darke colour, and a white one over it: Solyman in blevy fatin fter the Turkish shape: and Dagobert in ed vveeds; and they all vventa foot, dravving heir fetters.

UH Next after them mooyed the pleafing illErix, refounding of a good muficke: in his formost part vvas an artificiall grot, very cunningly fet with all kind of shells, whereof in hemiddest vvas a prettie vvatter vvorke, caling vp the vvatter very high. Vpon the top of the hill (delightfully fet all over with hrubs and flovers) was the Goddesse sitting under a pavillion made of cloth of gold: Shee would not hide her beauties, whereby she did gerthegolden ball, but vvasnaked, having a rovyne vpon herhead, and a golden scepter. Transphallsheves inher hand. Manie soules of Kings and knight did lie there oppressed by her feet. Her dread full and withall lovelie sonne stood before he shooting vncessantly his guilded arrows a mong men.

knights Sophrodrot, Andristator, and Memphron. The first caried vpon his helmen golden lyon, and in his hand a silvered key Vpon th'others head-peece vvas a turtledow and in his hand a broken columne. The third his helmet vvas marked by a serpent and he hand vvith a looking-glasse. Their oven names doe declare the signification of the things. They vvere richly arrayed in sating vvhite, blevy and red colours, laced vvit gold, and their horses vvith furnitures and plumes of like colours.

trimmed with rich saddles, and led at the han

by Romane servants.

The heavenlie sphere, that went so most, did deliver these verses to the Ladies.

LVC

made at Sintgart.

LVCIDOR

re he VVS 2

Metri met

d ker dove

third

nd hi

the

vvit s an

OUS han

it for 25.

CI

TO THE LADIES.

ee daintie Nymph's, vvhose honour is head venspleasure, life of the world; comfort of love forlorne, DVVD hepoverfull gods did gather all their trea-You to adorne.

Alfothe fame is such of your perfection Which can all hart's of their freedome bereave)

hat men thincke it to bee but a collection Them to deceave.

ut 1, since novo I doe behold those eyes, he gods themfelv's must vvorship, Icon-lo tengue, nor pe of man (how soeuer vvise) Can truth expresse.

For

Triumphatshevvis For your looks are thus sharp and cha wwithall, That hee, that would to praise them vn dertake, Must acknowledge his woitt should been Small, Anend to make. Adi Therefore come I to you wwith all this train Your vertues to adore with huble dewin This goddesse selfe would faine your slat remaine, To praise your benviies.

M

W

B

7

inc

W

16

Each

Then, faire, your beames doe cast vpon n dovune,

Beames, that doe shine brighter then Pho

bustayes:

But one sweet looke is sufficient to crown My head wwith bay's.

made at Stutgart.

MATTICE CONTROL 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0

VENVS

TO THE LADIES.

adies, by wwhose looks quicke and bright My sonne doethmaint aine all his might: Whose luring and threatning eyebrovu's Beelike arches to those faire eyes, That shine cleare as starrs of the skies, Whereby the foule her fortune knowws.

ince your vertue, beautie and grace Are th'onely impregnable place Within my wworld-governing raigne, I come bringing my sonne with mee, My crowne and Scepter, as your fee To give to your faire hands againe.

each one of you faire, rich, and wrife May boldly challenge the deare prife, Iuno, Pallas, and I did craue: And weee must needs together say.

All the gifts weethree can display,
That each of you allone them have.

Well then Ladies most chast and faire

Well then Ladies most chaft and faire,
That with sweet hue and with fine
haire

Doe entangle both soule and hart,
Goe on, augment your and my praise,
And make your fame more and more raise Vnfoulding hope, feare mirth and smark

0 l

VV

S. B

fon

do

CUI

(as

Çu

THA

Tee that are content with your lot,

And beeing tyed with Hymens knot,
The food of love doe take and give:

Acknowledge love allone on earth

Can change thorn's to flowers, griefted

mirth,

And to love well, is well to live.

But yee, wwhose eyes and harts doe swarm,
And by despight or desire starue,
While Cupids dart you doe not proue;
Know and beleeve steadfast, all ioy,
Without true love is but annoy,
And who will live well must well love.

made at Stutgart

THE EIGTH CHAPTER.

FIRST ENTRIE

OF THE NOBLE AND

WORTHIE GENTLEMAN, REnovumed both for learning and chivalrie, S. Beniamin Buvvinkhausen of VValmerode, of his Highnesse of VVirtemberg privie counsell.

t,

HE beholders beeing very busie, to feed their sight with the pleasant richesse of the traine of Lucidor, knight of pure love, some did praise the prettinesse of that invention;

fome vvere desirous to bee of his followers, and to vvorship his Goddesse; some that had once for saken her, to obey agains to her sveet dominion; and some (lesse expert then curious) did long to feele the thickling his (asthey thought) of those golden arrovves of Cupid: vvhen by a nevy sound of trumpetts their nature (that ever loveth noveltie) vvas lids fummonned, and their eyes vvere compelled ten o by their nature to vievy the arrivall of their milk nevyaffaillants.

E 4

Three squires came in first, their appa. hesse rell was alike, of blacke velvet : they had need fcarfes about their armes, and plumes vpon furn their hats and horses, of white, greene and red with

Then went three players, the two on flow cornets, and th'one on a fackebotte : their hats were high and fet with flowers, and theirap ridin parell was of greene fatin, all cut like greene cov leaves, with undercoats of red and white, and wit with red buskins.

A Dyvarfe, scarce a yard high, clad at the four Romane shape, came burthened with his man Lords head-peece, and shield (agreat deal mes bigger thethe carrier) vvhose impresa vvasu side have no impresa, with this word round a right bout: DIVA INSCRIBITE, PAREBO OCTUS noi

Next vvent the old Aymon, vvith a vvhite vvi long beard that covered all his belly. He she vvasinagreeneRomane-likearmour, enriched P with red, filver and gold: the bird that by her death getreth her birth was framed vpon his helmet within the fire : his right hand didimbrace a speare, vvhose biggnesse vvould havevvearied the fift not onely of Braggadoc chio, but of Anaxius himselfe : at his left side

did

baffe

and

wh

Li

and

Val

of

shi

on lid shine the cruell sword, hee had once gotled en of the great Geryon: hee did bestride a hese milkevyhitenag, vyhose courage vyould have passed over a vyhose armie, though the lovynesse of his bodie vyas scarce able to keepe the had heeles of his rider vp from the ground: it vyas pon surnished vyith greene and red satin, laced

red vyith gold and silver, bearing vpon his head and crupper great posses of all kind of artisicials on slovyrs.

Next after him came his foure fonnes, ap riding all together vpon one horse, that vvas ene covered with fatin of red and greene, layd nd with filver and gold, having feathers of white, greene, and red colours. As for the he foure gray brothers, they were armed Romane-like: their helmets covered with plumes of red greene and vyhite feathers : their fides garnished with guilded swords: their right hands with painted launces with penons of three colours : and their left armes with blevy painted shields, whereof the first shevved these vvords vvritten vvith gold: PRORELIGIONE : the second , PRO LIBERTATE : thethird, PRO PATRIA: and the fourth PRO AMICIS. vants a foote, vyaited on them in faire apparells of greene, red and white : the one carried a shield painted with two doves pecking at . one another, both over-shined from heaven,

the vvord vvas: SIC BENEDICITUAL
In the others shield vvere two hounds
gnavving both one bone, and a cudgell out of a cloved beated them, vvith the vvord: NEUTRI.

Five yvell furnished horses, led by so manie servants in vyhite vveeds laced vyith redand greene, made an end on this sheyv.

The challenge, the vvise Aymon did No. 10 fend to the ladies and judges contained thus Thursday.

Chal

yee

ede at Stutgart.

CHALLENGE.

TVOVS AND MOST

HONOVRABLE LADIES, AND yee most valiant Lords and Knights, may it please you to perceive the vvords of the good old Aymon, thus

faying:

Ithence the rednesse of my beard was changed I into whitenesse, the uprightneffe of my limmes into crooking, the livelinesse of mine armes into faintnesse, and the smoothnesse and flourishing of my mistreffe to vorinkles and mithering:

Triumphallshevvs thering: Yea sithence the pure chasing of so many jeopardous and ner sturdie adventures, my doughtil et foure sonnes did overcome, had ni even transformed their flaxen he haires into hoarinesse: Wee (ha bu ving for saken all vvorldlie mat m ters) did come not much abroad for contented to live for our selves, and ca to shunne (I doe confesse it) the go knaverie of the world, and the ha- or tred, where the lovelie old agen be commonly persecuted by. le But novv the returne of n this faire pring time, and much t more the renoveme of this much sweeter and most excellent assemblie did intice vs, to get vs againeon horsebacke, and to come bether, made at Stutgart. ether, where our harts, though and never cooled, but indeed much deected by our much vsed patience, night bee once more inflamed by the light of that eye of the world, buth much more by the stronger at might of those heavenly eyes, whose forcible influence (wee doe hope) na can easely restore againe our vihe gour, if not wwholly reintegrate a our youth: and vvhose bountifull felves) to increase their glorie the more, will prove their almight the better upon vs.

Truely pure land Truely our horsemanship and shevo is but small, and our meanemeanes, and heavens just judgement against the thanklesse

4

wworld, doegraunt no more but one horse for my source sonnes: Tet all is there never one among them, for but hath as much as source harts within one bodie, beeing each of them resolved to maintaine as so well as I my selfe: That doe not consist in out ward shew, but in that hee is able to performe and to defend merrily and quietly.

2. The contentment of all ladies and knights may onely get the desidered perfection by the suretie of their love.

3. Het

made at Stutgart. but 3. Hee that is silent and Yet aithfull can deserve the graceboth em, f Godand men. arts 1 That each have his lucke as (good and bad) in his power. And s. Every one doe cause his m, ovene joy and sadnesse. And this doe desire I, the old Aymon, and my foure good old boyes to defend against who so euer all dare contradict. But heere weedoe meane, to doe it at the meanest price, remembred in King Priamus his defie. I allone, the father, have by my thrift spared so much; that I may double it, hoping to get enough, to mend our armours, it whet our swords, and to shoot our horses withall, that week may againe goe about news adventures.

ht

nd

Aymon.

Floridan.

Erhard.

Adelgund.

And these vverethe sheves that did ap peare in the tilt-garden the first day of the running at the ring.

nade at Stutgart.

THE NINTH CHAPTER.

ad Of the running at the ring the first day.

OTHING could beefeene round about within the lifts, but filver, gold, jevvells, flovvrs, feathers, banners, launces and perions of all colours.

plendor did dazle the eyes of the beholders, und the richessed did ravish their mind.

id ap

erun

HE Troyan Monarch, having before his fight fo manie hardie and gallant nations borne of his bloud, felt his great hart pricked with the lames of hot defire, to make them by this occasion rejoyce and boast of their stocke; and his courage swelling with a justly-conceived nger of revenge against his foes, that ever Burft vyrong his fame by untruth.

The three goddelles (fitting neare him) lad then among themselves no other contenion, but to blelle this King with all contentathed voto him of her treasures, doth cleere and him nurrished in vvisedome, and instructed in feats of armes, giveth him her still-hitting gold den launce : But Venus to stirre vp the more his hart, doeth lift his fight tovvard thoseast stant beauties, but especially to that fare to Nymph, vyhose vyorthinesse is chiesly of the de Charitinians, and should bee of the vyhole he vyorld praised, & vyorshipped. And in truth be yee fickle-minded Goddeffes, your affiftance I vvas very needlesse. Forthis Goddesse, called F by mortall men Barbara-Sophia Duchesse of n Wirtemberg, hath allone much more povve fi in this matter, then yee three together.

On thother fide flayeth the great victor Scipio. His foule (adorned with the g two precious jevvells of Godlinesse and lu e Stice, vyhereby Princes are made like Gods) a ready, novy to replenish by the gracefull man naging of his bodily behaviour the Specta tours with as much aftonishment, as in his re victories hee did fill his foes by his povve in with avve and dread, and by his mercie will hope and pleasure. The brightnesse of the ti incomparable treasure, hee had obtained like n another (but a most faithfull) lason, piercing v hisheart, did move him, to please those dele Ctable eyes by his skillfull and comely demen v nôn

t

eques not, and to rejoyce within him selfe at so vnreand reprovable vvitnesses.

daying C. Lœlius (orhervvise called Prince dedin John-August Palatine) renovemed both for his valiancie and prudence intendeth to mainmore taine his vvell deservedly-gotten praise.

Of that mind is also L. Martius, vvho tran oftentimes in the flow ver of his youth, seconofthe ding that last great HE NR Y King of Fraunce, whole had set the caracters of his vertue vpon the truth backe of his ennemies, and therefore vvith that tains Romane Martius may vvell bee compared.

Called For his name (sounding in the booke of Eteresses in the Christian Prince of Anhalt) is as delightover full, as his vvised ome and valor bee fruitfull to ovve full, as his vvisedomeand valor beefruitfish to sillanus (els Prince Christian the yon-nthe ger) and all theother Romanes (that all vyere la lucture arles and Lords) are ready to doe vyell beeing ds) is affifted by fustice, vyherein all vertues doe mar meet.

The Emperesse likevvise is resolute to the remove by her gallantnesse all doubts, that might rise of her vvorthinesse. And the Nymphs of her circles doe attend vvith impatience to shevy, according to their vvish, the might and certaintie of their armes enured vnto such exercises.

ele Who can doubt of the commendable will of the Knight of godlie love? Also Sa-

zôr

phrofina and Oletria (this beeing Prince Ma bi gnus of Wirtemberg, and that, Craft Earle of ke Hohenloe, famous through Europa) and the co knights of vertues, doe expect alltogether, till pa the order graunteth leave vnto them, to finish by their courses their expectation.

Lastly the old Aymon (wwhose age if it an should bee reckoned vp by his vvorthie deeds, co vyould surmount the number of his yeares) for is affured to live but by doing well : And his the sonnes doe ayme atn'other scope, but to tread an

in their fathers steps.

Novy did those knights desire with all vy their hart to defend their challenge in earnel on against some foes : but sveet Concord, that be novy vvas visibly among them, and els is ste vvont spiritually to abide vvithin them; sem- ne blably those beauties did silently bid them to rec performe it joyfully in jeast (vvanting subjects pla fit for their anger) by the running at the ring. [cal

Then founded the trumpets together co when King Priamus leaping woon his fleed, and seising his golden launce came in the middest of therace, and performing suddenly his careere hee tooke his staffe vp from his thigh, and let it finke dovvnyvard with fo skillfull a justnesse, that hee caried the ring avvay.

Neverthelesse the most noble Scipio vvas not troubled by that, but following vpon

his

Ro

Ma hishorfe curvetting, heeturned vnavvares, and le of keeping an even line in his course, and a most the comely and just descent with his staffe, and , till passing like a lightning, hee hitted the ring too.

Lælius, Martius, and all th'other noble Romanes: After them the great Emperesse, if it and her Nymphes : like vvise Lucidor and his eds, companie: And Aymon and his sonnes, perres) formed each of them three careeres against his the some of Laomedon, with like swiftnes read and gracefulnesse.

nish

ed, the nly his fo

ing

010

on שנו

But when the funne (though neither a vvearienor saciated to behold this sport, but neft onely observing the lavy, shee must so observe) hat beganne to withdrawy herselfe into her Wels is sterne palace, our Worthies and Ladies returem- ned also to the castle, and after they had restonto red themselves at the supper, they went to see ects playa firevvorke, very skillfully framed like a g. castle and a V Vind-mill, and pleasantly acner, complished.

Triumphalishevvs

80

THE TENTH CHAPTER.

SECOND SHEVY

OF THE HIGH AND mightie Prince Lewis-Frederic Duke of Wirtemberg.

Vnder the name

of:

English Ladies.

S s o o N z as the beames of the funne did guild the toppes of the mountaines, the scaffolds in the tilt-garden vvere againe filled with people. The magnificence had yesterday so much delighted the eyes of the spectatours; and never-silent Fame did thus thickle the eares, and intice the mind

of

p.

ric di

yo

m

ba

La

an na

tec

ap

TV

ofthose, that either by too much businesse, or no great an idlenesse had neglected so rare a sight, that novy th'one as yvell as th'others thrusted into the place, and yvaited there impatiently for the midday.

Then did appeare againe the vvorthie Defendant Priamus, in his triumphant chaniot, and in that same order, hee had done the day before.

But by and by when even the Troyanes did yet ranke themselves, there came in a yong maid on horsebacke, that did sing very merrily.

of

Next after her vvent three daintie Ladies vpon lustie palfreyes. Their apparell vvas alike, their heads beeing set vvith curled tresses, enriched vvith jevvells, their necke bare, vvith a rich carcanet, and a rebatoe, their govvnes of vvhite satin of China vvith red and blevv stovvers, their petticoats of a seagreene colour: they had in their hand blacke sannes, in summe they vvere right like English Ladies, sitting a side as ladies are vvont to ride and naming themselves by borrovved English names.

Three knights, that followed after, vvaited on them: and they also were very bravely apparelled, bestriding horses richly trimmed with statelie saddles and furnitures.

Triumphall she was

of

I

for

di

ha

cif

tei

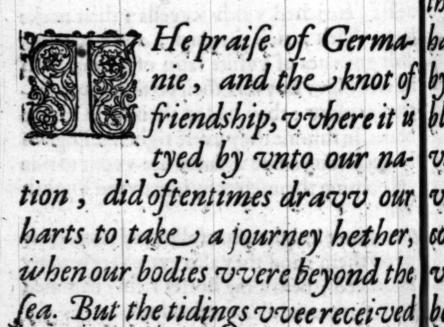

88

The reason of their comming vve may vnderstand by the reading of their challenge, as doth follows.

DEFIE.

THREE ENGLISH LADIES TO, THIS MOST WORTHIB

nade at Stutgart. nge, Duke of Wirtemberg should set forth to the honour of our nation, did constraine vs, to follow our barts, leaving our woonted exerasses of hunting, and for saking the silence of our vivoods, to runne af-- ter the found of trumpets. Thus o peedily wwee departed from England, taking no other companie but three knights, our conductors, that a have no other desire but to prove of by their constant service the u blamelesse love, they doe beare unto vs, that were might doe the like r unto them: and novu beeing , some hether, wee doe pray you e very kindly, to give vs leave, to bee partakers of your joy. And go Triumphallsheves

though neither our state nor our custome doe command us to use the the exercise of launces: neverthetesses the exercise of launces: neverthetesses the less that the exercise of launces: neverthetes session of this countrie to have to goe into the field, and according he prove most surely before the surely before the surely session of this countrie to superiore most surely before the surely session of the sauties, that constant in the surely before the surely session of the sauties, that constant is surely before the surely session of the sauties, that the surely before the surely session of the sauties, that the surely before the surely session of the sauties, that the surely before the surely session of the sauties, that the surely before the surely session of the sauties, that the surely before the surely session of the sauties, that the surely session of the sauties sauties sauties.

1. Womankind doeexcell mankind as farre as heaven excelleth earth: And that

2. Wee ourselves are farre more sufficient, then men can ever bee, to commend vvorthily out sexe. Andlastly that

3. The

made at Stutgart.

3. There beeno power neither he the accomplishment of a verheaven nor on earth able to hinlie, wous Ladies her desire.

re) Thus hoping it will please ne he judges to graunt vs an answer, to hat may not displease us, weedoe eft in all vertuous duetie at your ommand.

et

Darby. Winchester. Pembroke.

THE ELEVENTH CHAPTER.

ENTRIE

OF THE CAPTAINES GENTLEMEN OF THE CHAN ber, and other courtiers to the Duke of Wirtemberg,

Calling themselves

Knights of the robite and red united rose.

HE three gallant and quaint Eng. and lish Ladies did breed not onely great delight within the hart of did ! the present Nymph's, but also a vertuous jealousse in great Pria doe

mus greater courage, when a new found of trumpets striking the eares of the standers by, warned them of the arrivall of nevv affaillants, that named themselves Knights of the vyhin

hite anno

ng V ublet olour

white folu ndh

nree, vith elm

vith orfe

olor

bestr

made at Stutgart.

white and red wnited role. They came in this

Formost rode three trumpetters, bearing white hats with red feathers, white ublets and red coats and breeches, and both plours at their trumpets. Their horses, beeing white, where furnished with red, and in stead splumes they had a great rose, halfe white ndhalfe red.

After vvent nine squires, three after nree, covered with white glittering armours, with bases of red satin, red feathers upon their elmets, and launces with penons painted with the rose of both colours, upon white orses with red furnitures.

Nine knights did follow, attired in both olours, having white hats with red and white feathers, dublets of white fatin, and breeches of red welvet laced with filver, carnaton scarfes, white bootes and filvered spurres: bestriding white horses, furnished with red, and adorned with great roses.

Some footmen clothed in like liverie

did runne along.

The defie, they sended to the ludges, I

Chal

Triumphallshevus Triumphallshevus

CHALLENGE.

rey

all o

indi

Or as much as some examo pert Astrologers late mon add prognosticate, the o, a celestiall influence vv should cause in a place situated vncep der the signe of the Archer, an alto e semblie of great Lords, who but their vvisedome shall reforme and do confirme the old confidence of Ger manes, and abrogate the harme full mistrust of some evill instru Ch cted members of this nation: We cu that doe long much after such a reth

formation and vnion, hearing of kn

the meeting of forenowmed Prin lit

de at Stutgart: ney presently hether, offering with-all our service, as desirous to indevorour selves at any occasion, exand against all troublers of comte mon quietnesse. Wee doe hope alhaso, the well-chosen lord ludges cevvill not onely bee pleased to acon cept of vs, but also to give vs leave, to enjoy the priviledges of Adventurersat this exercise, where wee ndoeintend to defend,

That even as the haters of Christian peace doe deserve the curse both of God and men: so there bee no greater praise for a knight, but to further the tranquillitie of his countrie.

2. And fill beevvilling and ready to per fecute till to death all contention and seditious men.

igion may wwithhold any hones man, and much lesse a knight from such an intent: But

4. The love, hee bearethte his countrie, and to the Germane freedome, shall subdue all other sonsiderations.

THE

是自己是是自己的

THE TWELFTH CHAPTER.

SECOND ENTRIE

ef

THE VERTUOUS

ND RIGHT NOBLE S. BENmin Buvvinkhausen, of Walmerode, Privie Consellour to the Duke of Wirtemberg.

Namedarthattime

Lasla Janush.

EFORE vvee doe describe this prettie, and both sad and merry shevy, that purposely vvas kept all most till at the last, to stirre vp againe (as it vvere) the ovvsie beholders, Wee will see the storie, is brave knight (then called Lasla Ianush)

did

Triumphall shevus did send in stead of a defieto the Judges, And that I may english thus.

Historicall relation of this

Sheww. LASLAIA NVSH VALiant Hungaria

gave to George Castriot (other an wise called Scander-Beg) agains lu the Turkes, that hee was mos al dreadfullunto them, and knowing co

through Asia and Africa, so that the

made at Stutgart. even the children were affrighted by buname. This knight beeing maried with Volana (onely daugther to the Prince of Triball) had his mareagebleffed with six sonnes, named Reposus, Constantine, Stania, George, Vrius and Andrash: and was let daughters, namely Marie, Iella, Angelina, Vlaica, Maniza, and ric Nestoria. But though these daughhe ters were graced by all bodilie gifts in of Nature, and therefore of tetimes dismoved by many a gallant and noble he futer, yet would they never learne er any lesson of love, but still with resoni lute refusall seded backetheir louers of assuring them, their heart neither m could nor would ever bee bequeathed to the service of Venus.

Thus as the six brethren had no other desire or care, but dayly to shevusome triall of their courage, and to eternize their life by hafar- in ding it in the furious meeting of a their foes: so the six sisters liked he no other pastime but to keepe the bouse with their grand-father 2 (that was yet living) to serve w God, and to practise some surgerie. whereby they did succour their of brothers, yea even their subdued v foes and prisonners, and all others, th vuhose vertuous courage had caused them toget rather wounds bu then shame: so that in short time w they got great skill to heale all griefs, th and grevu very famous by their oc vertues, as their bretbren by their Pr warlike deeds. Balta to But soit fellout, that at a time ge, the brothers coming backe from an ir- incounter brought many Moores of and Turkes prisoners with them red home, among wwhich, the Kings of Tremisahis sonne, called Muley er Lid Hamet, mortally voounded was recovered by the help, those ie, adies did applie. But this curing eir of his bodie was to his hart a very ed vounding, which comming from rs, thekindeyes of the one of his merciad effeleeches, could bee healed by none ds but by her. But when the Phisition ne will neither know nor see the hurt, fs, then there is no remedie to bee ir ooked for. Novv this unfortunate Frince set at libertie by a great at ransome bee payd, must leave his

J

th

a

bart in a straighter prison at his sweet hostesse, where seing it could by no faire meanes beeredeemed of, hee did complot with some of bis friends, to constraine by forcebu deare hostelles to bee his dearer quests. Thus, understanding once, that the father and brothers were gone abroad to vvarre, bee came with his followvers, and getting the house easily, hee didput to the sword all that durst withstand, & rethere their grandfather (a poore old-manthat would not yeeld) was unluckily killed, and the six yong la fe dies were caried away to the temple of Venus at Tremisa, there ki to bee instructed after the pagar manner in the service of Venus bl his But their father and brethren at uld their returne extreamely grieved lof, at the losse of their daughters and bis listers, and at the death of their fabis ther, tarried not long, but went rer vuith all their force after the infiace, dedes, and surprised their strong ere towne, before they feared the e siege, and killed the Prince Zid Hamet and all his men. But in this commotion, some of the barba-Prince, and loving the hatred, as Cupid had conceived against la those faire Nymphs of Diana) he fell into the temple, and there rekilling the six ladies, made an a most cruell sacrifice of their bloud that never vivould have 9 4 Jacrin

104 Triumphallsheuvs sacrified their mind. Then Lasta Ve Fanush overcome by a past-comfort forrown, slewn not onely all god men, but caused also the Goddesse for Venus herselfe to bee shackled, and val her bloud-thirstie sonne to bee han-nt ged by the heeles at a gibbet. What lies more did befall unto them, how no they all were bewritched, and is preservedalive most miraculously be since that time, vooildbee beere bea toolong to tell. Therefore f will us but declare, that lately the dead N bodie of their old father met with them upon the sea, sitting in a little or boat, and for etold them of this most wa honourable assemblie, with pro- fe mise, both bee himselfe and Cupid vse should bee againe quickened, and he Venus made at Stutgart, la Venus delivered, with her sonne m- he purified, and converted to a all rodlie ladie: and they all saved fominchauntments, by the supernd pallmight, the heavens doe powre n- nto the gracious eyes of these Laat lies. But to keepe the fruit of this nost-excellent grace, they must nd ist vom, hereafter to endevor to by be all service and honour to these reavenlie beauties, and to follow ill uvvell honest Love as lavofull d Mars. h With this intent they all are e ovv come, befeeching the lord tudges to graunt them leave to fer in the face of the wworld, the le of their harts and hands unto bese celestiall beauties, vvbose inTriumphallshevvs influence the doe no lesse long for then they are full of desires to shew them selves thankefull.

HE lists were presently opened, the vventin

First three masters over the field richly apparelled, and provided vi

IN

mit

red staffes, and red feathers.

ned by three Tritons: the one, having a three forked mace, did guide a Venerian sy having forked mace, did guide a Venetian vyherid Boating vpon this yvatter : there the dead of man did lie in, in a red habit of the Hungaria fashion. he

Three servants follovved a foot, cladi va red , white and yellow fatin , and covere och with broad filvered hats; each caried a filvere he basket full eggs, that were filled with fvve The vvatters, to fling them among the people.

Next after there did flovy an otherar boy tificiall vvatter, vyhere vpon appeared the guiltie Goddesse, sitting in her vvaggon, tha was drawen by two swimming swans: she and vvas pompously adorned in a fatin govvne, bler

g for levy and carnation, embrodered over with nev oldandfilver: her head was fet with curled aires, jevvells and flovvers: but her hands vere fastened with golden fetters. Before erstood a gibber, all blacke and painted over vith teares, there did hang poore Cupid on his ot, holding yet his bovy and some arrovves. ive Tritons (the two formost singing, and the ogether the mischance of this Goddesse) confiel uded this vvave.

Tvvo faire vvingedangells did follovv: report on Cupids his foule veithing words, brought on Cupids his foule veithing darke clovyd, marked veith these veords:

ORMIENS IMMORTALIS ANIMA CUPI-

Next yvent tyvo Hungarian fervants a on. Th'one did carrie a red speare, broaching he Morian Princes his head: his left arme was armed with a shield painted with two ocks afigthing, and some gold falling from he heaven; The word was: VICTORI. mitar: in his shield vyere painted some hands bovvling at a marke: the vyord vyas: PRO-

After them came the brave knight Lasla Janush. The shape of his apparell was Hungarian, the colour crimson: his shoulder decked arich seymitar, in his hand a Hungarian mac and vnder his thigh a balash (that's a great singular) His steed vvas brave with great plumes, and an embrodered furniture after the Turkish manner.

Hee vvas follovved by his fix fonne riding tvvo after tvvo, all very stately arrayed bearing vvinged shields (as the Hungarian are vvont to doe) and long red staffes, when the heads of their foes did sticke on.

nimble Turkish horses, gallantly rrimme in and very fit for fuch an imployment.

The beveraied Goddesse comming a neare, that shee was inlightened by the review ying splendor of the present Ladies, did (falling downe on her knees) lift up her eyes, he hands and voyce, singing most vvofully and yet more sweetly thus much.

COM

An

grea

greating COMPLAINT

mac

g

revi

erth ding

OF THE GOD

ESSE VENVS when BEEING BOVND, TO THE

leve million r mediacesses, whose faire sight over earth and heaven raignes,

Whose curled golden haires could bind the godsinchaines, and The said and

(fal. Without whose godly soules the wreached he wworld should bee and Without vertue and glee.

And yee, sweet nimfs, wwhose eyes (eyes like the sunnemost faire)

Can fill all harts and soules both with hope and dispaire;

Whose looks daintily cast, vainquishing evry hart,

Can free vs from all mart.

Great

mophallshevus Grent goddesses let not my prayers be But doe deliver mee and my child from If mine offence is great, no lesse is novon this paine: A J grief, Then graunt mee fome relief. he Let my tear's mollifie the marble of you T'is well-done to procure for toyled mine v land of some restulation see Seeing that gods themselvs doespare theyh punishment When finners doe repent. dly foules the epresched I suveare by your bright eyes ( sole hope of he mineeftate) That to live modestly I still vvill imitate Your most vertuous steps: and to pavin R I set dovune My Scepter and my crowne: And TH The made at Stateart. His request of hers was appro ved by those greater Goddesses, and the efficacie of their syveetvyorking beames did affoord againe life to the dead, deliverance the condemned, and libertie to the prisoners. heold man revived, and vttered this fong to egreat altonishment of the people. SONG. nine What pleasing beames doedrive avvay my paine? the What as weet channee doth save me from thebane? Godlie Nymph's, enough hovv can I praise fheavens power can never higher raise you? Reioyce O vvorld! Those goddesse (more kind. and more powerfull then shee wwhose child is blind) They will, sweet Love shall bee chastly maintained, and by mankind vertuously entertained. The fro

982

mur

ief.

De

att

U

Triumphallshevos

HE tyvo angells, pulling the gibbet out from the yvaggor delivered poore Cupid, who with universall a joye, rant embracehis deare mother: Bushee seeing her yvofulnesse tur ned fo suddenly to glee, changed presently he The dolefull tune, with a cheerefull voyce, int the this song, to witnes her thankefulnesse.

TALEGO X TALEGOS

VENVS BEEING DE

Since that you have againe redressed
(Teen ymphs that are the gods desire)
My child and my poore self distressed,
Ton other glorie I aspire,
But that I get this blessednesse
As to serve still your vvorthinesse.

My indges his hart wwas more tender
As soone hee saw your hear nly sight:
And I with all my hart doe render Vnto you all my godly might:

But

bu Th

Th

Re

made at Stutgart.

ng d

113

But to serve you, t'is blessednesse, For peerelesse is your vvorthinesse.

By have by you not onely gained

etu Mylife, but also power and crowne,
ly he Therefore all that you have maintened,
intelleave it to you as your owne:

To serve you, t'is my bleffednesse,
For matchles is your worthinesse.

hus doe rule, according your pleasure,
Th'univers beneath and above:
Thus shall the wworld glad above measure
Resound your praise, your might approve:
Since that to serve your worthinesse
Can bee the greatest blessednesse.

H THE

arm also a modificante lo la pare

THE TIRTEENTH CHAPTER.

ENTRIE

OF THE MOST VVORTHIE AND TRVEL

noble gentleman S. Ferdinand Geitzkofter, of Gailenbagh.

Vnder the name

Queay Lurent Ise, Regent of Madagascar.

HE beginning of the last fong of Venus served for an ending of the sadnesse, bred by commiseration within the soule sard ling Famebrought nevves to their eares, of the arrivall of a model of the series of th arrivall of a most strange forreine King. And it leave at yvas indeed. This

The sch

BOR St. H

DIE naru

no r bugli

rvere Chri ot c

byap refol

and f Ruch

able there ofthe

tion, for o

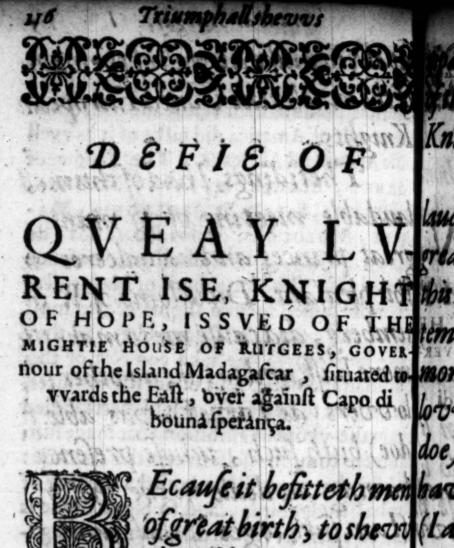

beare

This meeting of our Nymphes and forthies was knowne every where by the morious praise of their vertue and perfection. This meeting of our Nymphes and Thepeople of America did talke of it as yvell ER. sthe Ahans and Affricans. The Islanders of BORNEO, MALACCA, IAVA, MADURAS St. HELENA, IAPAN, St. APOLLONIA, MA-HLLE, MOLUCCA, de los ROMEROS, de Diego Sores, and of all other Islands doe I naruellat it. The inhabitans of Madagascar I no more gulled by the slights of the most buglie and execrable Tajuvaddei, as they were heretofore) doe take comfort of this Christian assemblie. But one of their princes, per content to heare ofit, felt his hart kindled byapraise-vvorthie ambition, that made him esolve to come himselfe over in this countrie: and for that purpose hee caused a number of Ruches (hudge birds, and so bigsthat one is able to carrie avvay an Elephant) to bee gahered : but fearing, least the common people of these countries might take some perturbation, and make some vproreagainst him, and for other reasons weeshall know, hee did forbeare to come with fo great a coyle.

Assoone as hee was arrived before the garden at Stutgart, hee sended a letter in lieu of a challenge to the Lord Judges, that was written with gold upon a strange greene cave, and may thus bee englished.

H a DEFIE.

of great birth, to shew (La themselves by their more over deeds worthin particular of their noble stockes: find (following the steps of my predecessours) determine, to take a drespourney in these coutries, and print medes.

cipal

made at Stutgart.

pally to make a tryall of the valor the much renovoned European Knights.

Thetidings, I had of this most laudable meeting of so manie great princes and cavaleeres in thu pleasant Dukedome of Wirtemberg, did cause me to make the more halt, and to take no other follovvers (as I well was able to doe) buth such, whose presence having no deale in the victories lam sure to get of these most famous knights) may not claime any part of my glorie.

Novv since that Fortune that still is ownt to favour dreadlesse courages) conducting meeby sea in a short time about the

halfe world, and then through many a goodlie countrie, hat, brought mee hether: I doe intend by your leave, in this field of hon

That the name of a perfector Knight is not onely gotten by deeds of provvesse, but also by constancie and faithfulnesse in Love.

Idoe not doubt of the victoria, whereby I doe rather hope the whole obtaining of my desires. But yet, if often-changing Fortune should deceive me for the time

nug ime, I am sure of this comfort, by he certaintie I have, that to be end overcome by this peerelesse knight, and to overcome all other knights shows a most equall honour.

Thus commending my selfe De to the grace of these most gracefull badies, and to the favour of the second sudges I rest

Your ever to bee commanded

Queay Lurent Ife, named Knight of hope.

H 4 The

? The lifts beeing opened, theere would Formost two pipers playing most in fully on pipes made of reed. They were naked, but their faces, haires and their who bodievvas as greene as any graffe; their head and their vyafts were compassed with branched worke framed of greene leaves.

Next after them appeared their Princ on horsebacke. His bodie vvas of a brigh greene colour : his haires like vvile greene ad orned with a greene golden crowne, and hi hand with a scepter. Heedid bestride a horse 6 vvhose colour vvas of a sea-greene, daple with greener spots: his furniture was mad of artificiall branches full of greene leaves, ver strange and delightfull to the eye.

Six ferving men a foot vyaited on him they were all bare, beeing their skin greene their heads crovyned with greene garlands and their wealts environmed with greens branches, their right hands provided of greene javelins, their linke armes of greene threecornered litle shields, and their fides of greene Imytars, so that there was nothing to beefeen on them but t'was greene.

Lastly brought such an other greene Madagascarian a horse most richly furnished.

omanustra Deficia Steach Lehusdon

tou nelfe of the mind. Earney lavy a follow HE readilyens, carried payers of the lord and

4

FOVRTEENTH chapter.

SHEVV

dh OF THE WORTHIE orfe GENTLEMAN MASTER THOmas de Spinosa,

Naming himselfe

I herion Satyran.

vvho rhead

vith

Princ

origh nead

aple

nad ver

um

ene ads ene

end

10

ne

10

Hosegreene-bodied Madagascarians, caufing great pleasure and admiration to the beholders, vyould have longer intertained the gluttonous fight of the gazing people, but that the eares, hearing the shrilling found of a horne, and the vyhooping of huntsmen did intreat the eyes to please the curiousnelle of the mind. So they savy a foster. in a greene liverie, carrie a paper to the lord Iudges, containing a Defie in French, I thus doe translate.

THERION

F

CO

ex

17

TYRAN, VVHO THE GREATNES OF HIS COV. rage, by the strength of his arme, and by the afaftance of his truftie hounds did kill manie beafts more furious, then the wild boare of Erymanthe was, sendeth greeting to the most 17 Valorous knights, and more vertuous

Ladies heere affembled.

Eeing some dayes agoe a bunting, my bounds did s thrust up a great stag, and pursuing him so hotly through manie a vvood, they gave him death not farre hence in the forest

Ocrago. There causing my wounds to bee againe coupled, that might returne home, fluddenly. didheare the voyce of the Goddeffe A Fame, announcing the happie birth of a little Demy-god in this countrie, and for his fake a most east excellent meeting of manie a magnanimous Prince and Knight, not intending (to vvitnes their common joy) to prove their provvelle in the fight of the most beautifull Ladies. This tiding pricking my hart (as well desirous of rude adventures, as of (portfull bunting) did induce me to take my way hether, and to intreat the lord ludges (as I doe most bumbly) for leave, to helpe to fet for ward this StateAND THE STATE OF THE stately triumph, and wwithsta ding the most wworthie Lord D fendant at this exercise of running at the ring, to maintaine, That

A Knight shall bee expert a well in Hunting, as in feates of Armes and of Love.

THERION SATYRAN.

His noble hunter, arrayed in gray fatin, having a baudricke vvithat horne about his necke, and a staggesfoot in his hand, came in the lists onely accompanied by his huntsmen, that were handsomely clothed in greene, liveries, with their hornes about their necks, leading their hounds in couples, who by the musicke of their whinning crie testified, the woods and fields adorned by nature were more pleasant with them, then the citties and places of artificiall pleasure.

These

ta Thefe yvere all the entries of the affailthat came the fecond day in the lifts, here, after they had turned twyise about, and ner med their skill in horsemanship, they ged themselves the one after th'other, and rated with lesse doubte then impatience, the order did command them to finish eir hope ; trying their fortune against the tar Laomedonian.

FIFTEENTH chapter.

OF THE RUNNING TAY THE RING THE tha adiiyy odii fecondday. tappes -29

ilts

ds

a-of

D

at

ta

Y couragious soveraigne (then named Priamus King of Troye) did hold againe with his both fure and gracefull hand a gilded staffe, and his proudlieed did even (as it vvere) daunce at the weet play of the nine godlie fifters, when the thimpers rounding together made his courage stately triumph, and wwithstan ding the most wworthie Lord De win fendant at this exercise of running the at thering, to maintaine, That was A Knight shall bee expert a their well in Hunting, as in feates of Armes and of Love.

THERION SATYRAN.

His noble hunter ; arrayed in gray fatin, having a baudricke vvitha horne about his necke, and a staggesfoot in his hand, came in the list onely accompanied by his huntsmen, that vere handsomely clothed in greene livered, with their hornes about their necks, leading their hounds in couples, who by the musicke of their vohinning crie testified, the voods and fields adorned by nature overe more pleasant with them, then the citties and places of artificial pleasure.

These

pr

made at Stutgart.

125

These yere all the entries of the assailants, that came the second day in the lists, where, after they had turned twise about, and they have detheir skill in horsemanship, they ranged themselves the one after thother, and waited with lesse doubte then impatience, till the order did command them to finish their hope; trying their fortune against the agreat Laomedonian.

THE FIFTEENTH chapter.

OF THE RUNNING AT THE RING THE Second day.

As

はるない

ds

2-

of

Y couragious soveraigne (then named Priamus King of Troye) did hold againe with his both sure and gracefull hand a gilded staffe, and his proud fleed did even (as it yvere) daunce at the ivveet play of the nine godlie fifters, when the trumpets rounding together made his courage and

and nimblenesse increase, and performe the min course, his Lord allotted skilfully vnto him, as the swiftly as any arrows shot from a strong bovy, Mai and Priamus, vsing his staffe most comely, was so just in the letting of the point fall, that cour

isit

heetooke the ring avvay vvithall.

Should not this staffe (that beeing ruled by this hand may bee compared with the dant form of Cephalus) put feare, or at least doubt into dan our adventurers? But they thinke (I doe we thinke) to have no lesse dexteritie, if Fortune print did but favour them. And verely the three Enwitted Blish Ladies (that by this time have, like Zelsheimane, transformed their voomanhood into wittenance, the fecond Magnus both Dukes of Hutter Prederic, the second Magnus both Dukes of Hutter Briefler of the hendoe) did prove by their behaviour, as if in the hendoe) did prove by their behaviour, as if in the person assist the Troyanes) the voould by their of the over their heads with bay, and their names with Renoveme.

The first (called Darby) vventherhorse to the carreere, beating the ground according to the measure of the trumpets, and then pas-fing fuddenly did not miffe thering.

Winchester and Pembroke did follow with vnreprovable a gracefullnesse and swistnesse, and take the ring likewise avvay.

The Knights of the red and white

the mited role were the next that ran: and then the brave Lasla lanush: after the Prince of W. Madagascar; and lastly the gentle hunter.

But what need is it to describe their courses? and if it should bee needfull, how is it possible to doe it duely? Therefore let it aled suffice, that till each of the assaillants had person to dant, the day was worne out: and then they went againe to the castle. There, when the me Princes were yet a feeding their stomackes in with chosen meats; their eyes with prettie they with chosen meats; their eyes with prettie they with kind conference and sweet musicke, is came into the hall two drummers and two of suters, apparelled in fatin of red and white, of the Italian fashion: and such an other that went after them did proclaime the statuts to bee kept at the footsight: and then a Challenge is of three knights of Malta, as you may see (if it pleaseth you) in the following chapter.

en la companya de la

SIXTEENTH THE chapter. gin melmie cris

STATE NTR I Englement ben

Of three Knights of Malta

CTHE ONE

BEEING MY SOVE RAIGNE: THOTHER HIS

brother Levvis-Frederic, and the third Craft Earle of Hohenloe)

Defendants at the Footfight.

Hæbus driving avvay the darkenesse of the night, began no sooner to lenghten his beames; and renourishing fight, to establish the thirteenth day of the moneth, the Romans called

TIOV YEI

osti hre

and by the name of the falle God of those was filled with the found of rumband drummes, and the tilt-garden with the courtiers, as if all the people of Germanie lidmeet. As for our most excellent Ladies, nightie Princes, and all the courtiers, they went early to dinner, some of them to make hemselves the some ready to withstand the hemselves the some ready to withstand the hemselves the some inticed with it on both ides by the divulged challenge, which I doe tanslate as followeth.

DEFIE.

HE Spirits of manie thousand deceased braue knights (once of the order of Rhodis, but novv) of Malta, I conconjecturing by their wrife fore east, es by sufficient circumstances bovv the troublesome jarring of Christian peoples among them selves, should give occasion to the Turkes, to affault againe Maltage the fore-fortresse of Christendometh did resolve together, to send some me of their brotherhood backe into the vvorld, vvbo proving their everta during good affection, mighted avvake the drowfie courages, and cheere up the provvesse of gentriabe to resist by times ( uniting both he their woords and swords) the till Turkish tyrannie. The fate diamo assigne this performance of counsell nou unto us three, named Petersha D'ambusson, Philip Insul Adam, e me februde la Valette, once bappie es chiefs of that order, and full well orguninted with the dangerous materprises of the Turkes. But even vve beganne to retheyer agains at the brightnesse of. whis sunne, wohen were wiere more rejoyced by the newes, wwee hipeard of the meeting of those erbardie Lords and Knights: and beeing novo come bether very fitmy, wee doe intreat all that doe love inbeir bonour or countrie, to gird the suvords es to keepe them selvs till ready to extoll and to proliamote by a zealous valor the boselfour and name of God, and the tershame of his foes. But the most honourable Lana dies wee doe beseech and comun by the Love and Faith they doe nourrish, and by the beautie and grace, they doe flourish by, to graunt leave to all their Cava leeres, and either comanding tho that are willing, or spurring tho that are flow, to move themal by their easely-persuading skill, it has ard not onely their bloud for the freedome of Christendome, but also t'appeare to morroww (beeing vo the thirteenth day of Mars den, to prove there before the world tye their courage and force. For there vvee doe intend, fighting a foot with pikes and by suvords to maintaine against all far 1. That rec adventurers,

made at Stutgart.

133

That the commendable exrcise of armes (vied against insidelles) may acquire the grace of God, and the greatest praise of men.

2. That hee that voould not ladly shed his bloud for the defence of his countrie, bee not morthie of the least honour, love or favour of a Ladie.

3. A Knight that by some certaine reasons is not capable to bee tyed by the still-lasting knot of matrimonie, can neverthelesse deserve by his expedient service the suveet favour of his Ladie, and withall receive all worldlie happinesse:

And lastly

1 3

4. The best remedie for all me lancholicke humours, and to releen with baseminded fellowers, commething onely from the wonderfull skill of ofer womankind, so that vvhosoever king can not beebrought to Vertue by the wire Soveet-piercing lookes of a Ladie, down is bereaved either of his feeling, or thre of his voit.

He Ladies and Judges Having taker Knig their places, were presently saluted four by the thundering ordnance, and by the found of trumpets, drummes&

flutes, and advertised of the arrivall of the stout and Defendants.

Then came in the lifts a most statelie Galley, very skillfully framed, even as the galleys that are vied to yvarre against the Turkes. bulke, and the vvhole vvorke vvaspainted and guilded over, like vifethe mast, the sayles and the cordes of filke, the oares red, the chiefenfigne red with a white croffe, where St. John Baptist vvas painted in : th'others vvereof diverfecolours. Vpon the orelop stood the three most valiant Defendants, apparelled in redand vyhite, the shape vyas Italian ; their hats gray,

led) talia

Auto tire

dref (bet clac

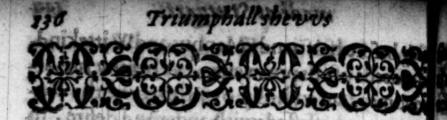

five nec tifts

she leap YY:

adorned with jewells and great plumes of red with a vyhite crosse: their bases of carnation hain embrodered with filver : their breeches ofcrimson velvet laced over with filver: their garters of carnation and filver: their filkie ftomets did lye before their feet, and were richly wrought with gold and filver, and ovvershadovved by great bunches of red and white feathers. Not farre from them did appeare their three marshalls of the field, or (as they are called) sticklers, arrayed very gallantly after th'Italian manner, of both colours of their Lord-Knights. At thother end of the galley vvere foure trumpetters, three drummers, three fluters, and alitle boyplaying on a tabor, all attired in the foresayd liverie. As for the patron and th'other shipmen they were likewife dreffed in both colours, but the fixtenne slaves, (beeing eight on each fide) that did rovv, vvere clad in red : and this galley was provided of five peeces of great ordnance, and of all forts of necessarie things, and thus shee came into the lifts floating vpo an artificiall vvatter, and after shee had cast revice about, they landed, and leaping over boord went into a tent, and vaited there for their contrairie parties.

bus bot at boller

EHT source I sent he on lop Rope the three

THE SEVENTEENTH chapter. oin trie vifi

dic

TU hay

m

d

s a h oled bol

ENTRIE

OF THE AVNCIENT per

GERMAN WARRIERS, brought in by the Elector Palatine, named Harmt- own tvv -coolgrage de tres seus seus de este perd bre

AME (that goddesse, vyhosein- of finite eyes, eares and tongues are cie ftill bufied) did foone fill the vvorld with the report of the the enterprise of those three Malte- VV

fian Knights. The German Worthies, that doe enjoye all joy vvichin the Elysian fields, ni hearing of these nevves, doe like this meeting av of their fuccessours very vvell, but they doedil- ne like veterly the arrogancie of those three strangers, that dare to divulge fuch a challengein fuch a countrie.

The most famous Harminius, rehearfing

de al State are

before his friends Mannus and Wittekin deeds of his provveile, vyhereby hee of mines had wholly overthrowne the Ro manes, is possessed with anger and defire, to visit vvith a companie of his friends this counmeagaine, and to bring both a fruitfull inftrudion for their heires; and to those Defendants a harmefull acknowledgement of their rash od boldnesse.

So what they resolved, they presently Tperformed, For what is able to refift VEL TUE? There they came to the tilt-garden, and having leave to goe in, their order vvas fuch:

ma

Formost vyent tyvo drummers and two pipers arrayed with dublets of fatin, breeches of velver, with puffes, ofpurple colour, and laced with filver, their feathers were of white and purple, and they played the auncient Germane stroake.

Next after them did goe three sticklers, their apparells of thatfame shape and colour, vvere very statelie.

HARMINIUS, the praise of Germanie vvent after them allone. His vvife head wvas covered with a helmet, whose brightnesse vvas overclovvded by a bunch offeathers of white and purple colour : his bodie armed with a cuirats, that (beeing as the vyhole armour, all of filver) vvas fo artificially vvrought, that it was to bee doubted if the workemans

Triumphall shewvs bales and puffed breeches; and long frockings ambrodered all over with filver, were purple coloured. That fovord, wherewith hee had the Quintilian companies dispatched and sen so Pluto, did glifter at his fide in a scabbard enzichid vvith precious stones : and his nevereveried fift did hold his long pike, vyhose T sharpenesse had beene distastfully tasted by manieagallant Romane. His squire vventafter him arrayed like-M wife bravely in both colours. And then came eighteene auncient noble Germans, that with their generall had forfaken their rest to review their ( yet deare) | 57.8 countrie. They went three after three, apparelled all alike, in white armours, breeches vvichpuffes, bases of satin, silkiestockings and scarfs, all of purple colour and embrodered vvith silver: bearing svvords and pikes of that colour, and vvhite shoes, most gallant and delightfull to the beholders. lightfull to the beholders.

Their minds vvee may perceive of their

Domance Greening or

celes. Les deste l'artificient l'

defie, thus interpreted.

COURTE

to strosstructor may morrow explor

made at Stutgart.

DEFIE.

THE AVNCIENT MARTIAL GERMANS,

THEIR SVCCESSOVRS,

the Lords and Knights of Germanie.

es

ıd

ic

oVing children, bretheren, friends & heirs: What's the reason, that, at your valorous exeret your triumphant entries, cises, at your triumphant entries, and brave shews, you must allwases borrow your inventions of the old Romanes, Grecians, or euen

Triumphallshevvs even of your great foes the Turkes, pro or of other Poeticall fictions, and of very idle tales? Why doe you thinke your felves so poore in the plentie of examples, your forefathers left for you of their worfer thines and gallantnesse, which are not onely fit to bee imitated, but also to incite your children to ensue in you this same race of vertue and valor. ta Nono to the endyou might bee taught the better, bow to behave you in those matters furthermore, Wee baving forsaken our sepulchres come to shew our martiall skill and prowesse before the eyes of thu most magnificent companie, at the combat you doe ve a foot within the lifts, where wee desire,

wi

kir

honour of our Nation to rove and to defend these articles u follow.

In That, though great deeds and adventures of straungers doe frewe much to awaken the spirits, and to stirre up the courages: not with standing the examples of sour auncestors are more prosintable and more convenient, to inkindle your harts with the love of Vertuous enterprises.

2. That in setting forth your triumphs, and martiall shorts, you should rather wife true stories (where you have a great number of) then false and foolish lyes of Mars,

3. That like as the fafetie of the Romanes did confist upon the de fence of their auncient commendable lavvs and customes: even so shall wee groundour securitie voon the protection of our old and good constitutions, and never subject our selves unto any fashion or tyrannie of strangers.

4. Andlastly, wwhat soever Some will pretend to prove, vve 1 all bee not Germanes: neverthelesse mee doe protest by the assurance of truth it selfe, that weee are good and loyall Germans, issued from the bloud of the very auncient and noble German Nation.

HARMINIVS.

211

pi fe

th

EIGHTEE chapter.

OF THE FRENC

Y-KNIGHTS, BROVGHT by the Prince Frederic Marquis thenolof Baden I spent a John

Course his deal wife.

Hz brave companie of Ge man Worthies, having turned tyvice about, and pleafedall th spectatours, but chiefly the Ladies, by their gentle manners and curtefies, vventinto an other tent, that vvas pitched directly over against that of the Defendants : When a nevy-comming found of drummes strake theeares, and denounced the arrivall of French Knights, defirous to trye their fortune against the knights of Malta. The truce lately made in France gave so much libertie vnto them , as to come to fee those sheyys, and to prove their valiantnesse (that hateth outh all idlenesse) in jeast, being hindered to doesn't good earnest.

They were admitted, and appeared in

First yvent three sticklers, having gray hats with white and carnation feathers, white dublets of cloth offilver, round breeches of carnation fatin, and long whitefilkie flockings, white shoes, carnation fearfes, and long flickes in their hands of both colours.

They were followed by two fluten and two drummers, pleafantly attired in that fame liverie of carnation and white.

Then came the brave Marquis (called the FAITHFULL KNIGHT) allone. He was in a vehice armour: his gray hat, where many icevells did shine ypon, yvas darkened by great feathers of carnation and white ! his bases and round breeches of carnation fatin, layd over with filver laces; his long stockings and shoes white : his fide provided of a filvered sword in a scabbard of carnation velven and his hand of a partifan of filver and car-

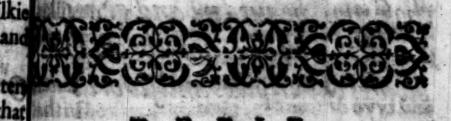

His squire vvent next after him, attired in both colours, and carrying a long pike, and the helmet of his lord, where a great bunch of whiteand carnation feathers was fet vpon.

Next came twelve French Knights, in white armours, with feathers, scarfes and ap-

pasells

ellseven like their Captaine adomed mo allantly.

They contented all eyes by their brave chaviour, and faluted the Lord Judges and Defendants with a challenge I thus doe manslate.

EFIE.

in in E FRENCH MOST HONOV

d in gray

ers,

ree-

led

HE joy wwee received of the joy of so manie Princes of the bleffed Union, didmove vs to take a jourbey bether : and there being fo indly allowed of the participation

146 Triumphallshevus of their pastimes, wee didresolve to goe against these Defying Maltesian Knights, and to prove, for the honour of this Union, and of those most beautifull and gracefull Ladies, by the unreprovable blowes of our pikes and swords DF That a Knight, to get the greatest glorie, shall imploy his fervicefor the Union. 2. For the honour and defence of Ladies. 3. Andlastly for his friends. dla

THE CTY!

unc

TEGERATE GER

THE NINETEENTH

ENTRIE

OF THE AMAZONS,

ONDVCTED BY PRINCE Magnus Duke of Wirtemberg, then named Myrina Queene of the Amazons.

> HE French Knights had no fooner ranged themselves to the auncient Germans, but that they savy come in the lists

Tyvo drummers and tyvo uters, armed after the auncient Romane fanion: their bases yvere of yellovy satin, with d laces, having red and yellovy feathers vpon heir helmets.

Threesticklers event after, apparelled eryrichly, the shape was Romane, their bases were red embrodered with gold, their armours and helmets guilded, with great unches of red and yellow feathers.

X 3 Then

Triumphallshevve

Then appeared the famous Queene Merina. Her head was covered with a helme whose glittering shew would have dazle the sight, but that it was shadowed over high-wagging seathers of red and yellow the curled lockes of her faire haire would not lye hidden, but gave leave to the blithe win to play withall, and make them flye about he shoulders: Vpon her bodie shee ware a while glistering armour, with bases of red and yellow, framed like flames: the neather parto her garment was of yellow satin, layd with red: On her left arme she bare a shield forme like the head of Medusa: on the same sich was her sword, & in her right hand a javelin was her sword, & in her right hand a javelin was her sword, & in her right hand a javelin was her sword, & in her right hand a javelin was her sword, & in her right hand a javelin was her sword, & in her right hand a javelin was her sword, & in her right hand a javelin was her sword, & in her right hand a javelin was her sword, & in her right hand a javelin was her sword, & in her right hand a javelin was her sword.

She was followed by one and twent Amazons, going three after three; they we all most pleasantly arrayed in the colours an shape of their Queene, in white armours, fe thers, shields, javelins, bases, and petticoats red and yellow, and with white buskins.

As soone as they had performed the shevy and prettie honour to the Ladies, the placed themselves neare the French Knights against the three Defendants, and publishe this defie.

GHA

CHAL

en

made at Stusgart

CHALLENGE.

OV

ent

ve

WIRINA

ye a VEENE

WIBYA, DEFENDOVR

F THE AMAZONIAN REALME, lin with her invincible companie of Amazons, to this most excellentassemblie.

Tis very true, the Ladies and Knights in Germanie are most morthie both to bee beved and praised. Wee doe not enie what all eyes doe see, and all ongues doe confesse. Even this is pe reason, why wee have for saken

Triumphall sheves

250

our countrie, taking voith vs be three out of the innumerable Knights (vuhofe servitude ou pittie did lengthen by the short ning of their libertie) to conduct ? hether, to the end vivee could ! & these countries increase our f nowme by the decreasing of the glorie of these German Knight But by the small number, W did (as yet) meet, wee got adm ration, and by admiration know ledge, how the most part of Dem gods and Worthies were affemble at this court, intending to shev their courage and provvesse before the light of their Goddesses an Nymphs.

Those nevus, agreeing vvit

the very vvish of our harts, caused we to vie such speed, that now vvee are heere, in good hope, the natural courtesse and gallantnesse of those brave knights vvill not onely graunt unto us the entrie of their field, but also like vveapons, if they doe vie others then vvee have:

"" vvhich beeing mooved by our dexteritie, shall surely ingrave into their memorie

1. That they are neither able to laude vvomankind (and especially the present Goddesses) sufficiently vvith vvords, nor

h

U

with their deeds and service.

They could all eafely bee conftrained by our benotie to adore vs, but we have hidden it under our armours.

For thus their Ladies shall have no occasion of jealousie, and they themselves no excuse, but must needs advouch openly, their losse and our acquisition of this victorie come onely from the might of our hands.

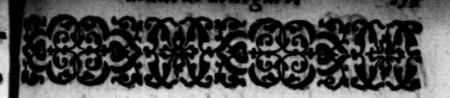

MYRINA.

THE

no

ha

THE TVVENTIETH chapter.

ENTRIE

OF THE TONG GER-MAN GENTRIE, BROVGHT IN by Prince Frederic-Achilles Duke of Wirtemberg.

rd

St

ic

HE auncient German Warriers (vvee have heared of) vvere the first assaillants, that came to resist the boldnesse of the three Knights of Malta:
novy there come some young noble Germans, that hope to finish the quarell by their stout attempt.

The Charitinian Achilles (vyhose soule is indued with more vertues, then that Grecian Achilles, that tyvo dayes agoe was in the lists; and whose head and tongue are stored with more wit and eloquence, then Vlisses had) brought in those yong gentlemen, that K 5 (beeing (beeing yet of the Colledge) are voont to imbellish as well their minds with learned with tings, as their bodies with the exercise of chivalrie.

Their entrie vvas thus performed.

Formost vvent tyvo drummers and fluters, attired in dublets of blevy tusse-tassata, in breeches with pusses of red and blevy, blevy stockings and vyhite shoes, with red & blevy feathers vpon gray hats.

Next came three sticklers very gallantly arrayed in blevv and red fatin.

Then yvent the Prince allone. His head yvas covered with a gray hat, and his hat with a plume of red and blevy, adorned with jevvells: his bodie with a white amour, ennamelled with blevy: his bases were blew embrodered with red: his breeches of red fatin with blevy puffes: his stockings blevy, his garters red, and his shoes white. He had in his hand a partisan of both colours, and a glittering sword at his side.

A page did vyaite on him, dreffed in thesame liveries, hee carried his lordshelmet, garnished with a great bunch of red and blevy feathers, and in his hand a long pike.

Mext after event revelve yong gentlemen, three after three. They were most gallantly clothed in both colours, with armours, feathers, scarfes and swords even as their Captaine. made at Student.

After they had wealked about the turne of the field, they tooke place neare the Amazons against the Knights of Malta, sending vnto them, in stead of their challenge, some verses in German, I doe english thus.

DEFIE

OF THE YONG GERMAN GEN.

We doe not come falfly our felv's to praise, And our ovvne nam's by borrowved fame to raise:

From Limbo-lake, from hellor from the skie.

For (sure) we are neither sayrs, nor spirits.

Nor Demy-gods, nor angells by our merits.

Germans we are by birth, bloud, hart and hand,

For

5 . . 2

im

vri chì

For the defence of Germanie we stand. What need is it to counterfeit our name? Can Germanie to Germans bee a shame? No. the whole world (we trust) can doubt no wwhit, But there bee men for wwarre and peace most fit. And as for vs, though great bee not our skill To fight, so yong, yet is not small our will. For here we are refolute to resist Those boasting knights, with German hare and fist: Hoping wwithall, our first German-like blown's Shall with great found publish their vndone shevus: And our first proofe, by their last exploit knouvne Dark'ning their fame shall lighten our renouvne, So that the world shall have henceforth delight, To talke & sing of their losse and our might. And these yvere all the assaillants, mounting even to three skore and seven knights, that appeared in the lists, and did fight against the three Defendants. THE fight generally.

THE ONE AND TVVENTIETH

OF THE FOOT.

Va princes could not bee contented to have shevved their gallantnesse and comelinesse on horsebacke: Novy they are armed, & readie againe vyithin

the lists, to doe as much a foot. The eyes of the greatest and fairest Goddesses of Germanie are present, not onely to bee voitnesse of their deeds, but also to inlighten their hearts by their sweet sight, whereof one looke allone is able to make their force ynvyeariable.

The found of the blovy-threatning trumpets, confounded with the terrible thundering of the canons, and with the rumbling of the imboldning drummes, did no fooner fummon the two contrarie parties to the incounter, but that the ftout-hearted Harminius on the one fide, and the magnanimous Dambuffon on th'other fide, comming out of their tents, having closed their vifers; and made courtefies to the Ladies, seifed their long pikes, brandishing them with their forcible armes, and approaching against one an other with threat-

6

d

di

CO

hi

for th

CO

fig

br

fu

ri

te

C

U

t

chreaming manners, fuddenly with a like cermintie and nimblenesse broke them each on th'others head, so that the spinters flevy aloft. Quickly each of them tooke an other pike, and after this also the third, which by fure and strong pushing vverelikevvise bravely bursted in peeces. Then either fide having castavvay the toncheons of their pikes, and drawine their fivords, they went together with gallant brayerie, and faluted their heads with fo found blovves, that the peeces of their fyvords flevy vp to heaven yvard : but taking other fovords, they redoubled both with skill and force their mightie blovves, as if they would have cleaved their heads, vntill the stickless authoritie persuaded them to finish their hatelesse combat, and brought them (both by their strength and courteousnesse victorious and vainquished) againe to their tents.

After them vyent the valiant Mannus against the stout Insuladam: and after their sight, came forth the renovemed Wittekind, and against him the mightie De la Valette: & then tryed their adventures th'other auncient Germans: after them the faithfull Knight and his companie: then the famous Queene and her Amazons; and lastly our Achilles and his yong gentrie, sighting still one of the assaillants against one of the three defendants.

But it goeth beyond my capacitie, to de-

made at Stutgars.

Worthies, and I must acknowledge my weaknesse, confessing to bee not able to tell what mine eyes did see. Therefore (imitating that painter, who pour traying a great King, could not set out in colours his griese, covered his face with a cloke) I must suppresse the defect of my pen by my silence.

Nove before every adventurer had performed the single combat against a Desendant, the sonne finishing her appointed ordinarie course, gave place to the starres too, to get the fight of the feexercifes.

to dad

y

ie

ls

r

ł

After the fingle fight, all the Knights vvere parted in two equall companies, that vvent against one an other. There vvas brave and terrible meeting on both sides, and fuch anoyse of the crushing of pikes, clattering of blovves, clashing of amours, and battering of fwords, that the thundering and refounding of the ordnance, drummes, and trumpets could scarce bee heard. This combat lasted with such siercenesse and so long, that I doethinke, the one-eyed cruell smithes of Ætna vyould have beene tyred to hammer but halfe so much. They strake on either side peece meale, then with the right, then with the left hand, shevving their courages with fo brave gesture, as if their soules must first abandon their bodies, before their bodies vvould forfake

how this strife would have been ended, had not the Gods (growing, possible, fearefull at this coile, and doubtfull of their owne securitie) sent the angrie limping Vulcan invisibly into the rayles, who subtilly and suddenly with a horribly cracking fire, and clapping thunder did burst them into thousand peeces, and driving the parties a sunder, did finish this adventure.

Thus all the Worthies, according to theheavens commaund, turned in good order in to the castle, and there, beeing vnarmed, they went with their harts-conquering Nymphs to supper, and restored themselves with all kind of kindnesse and daintinesse.

THE

or fer In do

fil

pe

THE TYVO AND TYVENTIETH chapter.

图的武汉图法

VHAT VVAS

DONE THE NEXT DAY FOLLOWING.

at cu-

bly

nly ng

es, his

to er

15

He nextday (that was thursday, and the foureteenth of Mars) the Princesse Electrice her highnesse, and all th'other Princes, Lords and Ladies yvent after dinner

againe into the tilt-garden, there to entertaine their too-vyorthie fight with an other turney, or rather a darke shadovy of turney, reprefented by tub-headed adventurers. T'is a sport, Inever favy but in Germanie, and therefore doe I notknovy, hovy to tearme it. But to fee it doyvne the best I can, me thinks that even as one may fee the vnspotted sonne shine in a filthie puddle, or vpon a dunghill, fo doeth appeare some reflection of the vyorthinesse of lusterous chivalrie on those counterfeit riders. For they are commonly horsekeepers and groomes

add there is

Carling Will Will Street

proomes of the stables, that beeing armed, as I vill tell you, hazard themselves to get some manie falls without money, or some money not without falls.

They cover their heads, in stead of helmets, with tubs, that bee painted over with ouglie faces, as of Lyons and other fuch beafts. Such atubis very heavie, so that a man, beeing thus armed, and on horsebacke, is easely overveighed by it, and constrained to fall dovvne, if hee holdeth not his head very vpright. As for their bodies and armes, they are covered with a kind of hudge bigge facks, bumbasted with hay; and in summe, they are so bluntly garnished (saving their leggs that bee onely booted) that beeing fallen from their horses, they allone can seldome get vp from the ground, and never get on horse-backe without helpe. But for their horses, they vie most ordinarily very jades, or little naggs, furnished onely vvith a bridle and a very small faddle, vvithout a crupper peece, that serveth for nothing but for the stirrups : for they are layd vpon the horse without girths, that the most part of those earthlie riders doe carrie their saddles with them a digging.

Tyvo companies of such Dametas-like gentlemen came in the lists. The one did beare the badge of yellovy scarfes, thother years knowne by red ones; both sides adorned as I

ave

ha

be

W

are

VV

and feat

TVO

Soi

pig

flor

Mo

rus

Bra

vvi

vva

to f

Sor

Add

to t oth

Raf

vvi

nın

flyi

feat

hor

pus

VP t

sI

ne

ey

of

er

h

1,

y

2

have allready told, the colour of their apparells beeing just like as the chimney-sveepers are wont to vyeare in all the world, when they are most busic. Their behaviours, becomming well their proportion, could afright any child, and make every old-woman-like bodie, that leareth to goe in darkenesse, believe, that they were the true patterns of very bug-beares. Some of them to may bee discerned by their pigs-neyed sweet-harts, were trimmed with slowers and fox-tailes, and musted up like Mopsa was, when shee wished to have Donus a king. As for their weapons, they were Braggadocchio-like contented to have staffes, without swords.

The found of the trumpets could fcarce vvarnethem, and their horses beganne scarce to flart out; before they tumbled a ground. Some in their careere vvere toffed with their saddle to the mane, and againe from the mane to the crupper before they lay on the earth? others in lieu to hit their adversaries with the staffes, did hit them with the head, comming vvith it before their launces, as if they would runne before their horses : some yvent over, flying like shittlecockes, that have but tyvo feathers : and others , that had more skill in horse-manship, hitting their ennemies did push themselves dovvne: so that there yvas nothing seene but tumbling dovyne, & getting vp to tumble againe dovvne.

This hayle of tumblers beeing past, the Princes and Ladies spent the rest of that day in viewing the garden, grots, and other places of pleasure. But after supper they event to daunce, where the lord sudges caused the Ladies to deliver the prices to these Knights, whose dexteritie had beene seconded by Fortune and Vertue at the running at the ring, and at the footsight.

True it is, that Vertue (not subject at all to Fortune) is the best price of it selfe; and our vertuous knights (loving vvell doing, as vvell as Pyrocles, fort it selfe, and not for thankes) doe get great prices enough, by the praise of their immortall names; but following the custome of our vvise auncestors, there evere againe published, at this time by the giving of prices, principally the merits of the Prince Elector Palatine; of my Soveraigne, and then of manie more, that evould bee here too tedious to speake of.

er bei de gele de gelegen de gelegen de

to the the second of the second of the

THE

fix

hi

OII

VV

S

ha

be

made at Stutgart.

是自己的政治自己的

THE LAST CHAPTER.

OF THE HUNTING and fire-vvorke.

of c,

to Kid

ır

HE fryday vvas spent onelying gentle and courteous conversation, & in viewving my Princes his closet, and the like particularities.

But faturday (beeing the fix teenth day of Mars) Myladie Elifabeth her highnesse, and all the Princes and Ladies event on horsebacke a hunting and a haveking, where they passed some while with prettie sport. For it was thus wellfore-ordained, that as soone as they came in the field, it beganne: and were caught within a seve houres, three herons, sive wolfes, twentie hares, and some foxes.

Totell here the gifts, these Princes did bestovv at that time one on thother, is needlesse.

Liberallitie is the fole vertue, that belongeth properly to Princes: and even as the L 2 sonne forme by her nourishing beames can fill the earth with flowers and fruits: fo are great lords able to increase the joy of men by the sweet-nesse of their bountifull largesse.

My Prince gave some tokens of the great affection, he beareth to strangers, to the English nobilitie.

Likewise caused the Princesse Electrice and the Prince Elector Palatine, to bee done by the valorous and noble Sir Meinhard of Shomburg (vyhose merits can never bee matched by his Fortune) to the gentlemen attendants, and to the officers at my Princes his court. And generally all thother Princes have gotten of all vertuous minds as much love for their bountie, as praise for their other vertues.

Sunday after dinner, there came some sencers in the court, that before the Princes did sence in all kinds of vveapons, as they are vvont here to doe, to get some monie or some blovvs, and to increase their purse, or to diminish their bloud. But after supper there vvas played a prettie sirevvorke in the tilt-garden. It vvas a great ship, very artificially framed, painted over, and surnished with sayles, slying colours, and all things that doe belong vnto. It was beaten with suriously thundering canon-shots, that came from a hill without the towne, and it did resist shooting like wise tertibly, and casting sire out of all sides most bravely.

buried with ashes.

II che

lords

veet-

reat

lish

rice

one

lof

bee

at-

his

ve

or

re id re iMonday (that was the nineteenth of Mars) the Princesse and Prince Elector Palatines, and all th'other Princes departed against from Stutgart. My Prince with his brethren beeing gone with them out a little way, tooke his leave of them and came backe: but soone after, at evening (taking post) he went againe after, and overtooke them at wnawvares in a small towne, called Vayhing, where they passed allmost the night in dauncing and all pleasanmesse, and the morrow, after the breakefast and some short daunces, they did bid one another

FINIS.

farevvell.

MVSEVM BRITAN NICVM

